FARM AND GARDEN

HOW TO APPLY MANURE.

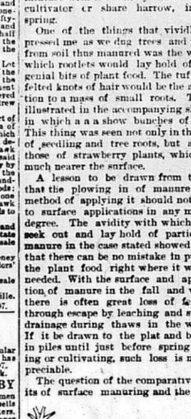
Comparative Merits of Surface Manuring and Plowing In Manure.

Elias A. Long learned a lesson in the application of manure when a boy in his father's nursery. He tells the story, as follows, in American Gardening: We purchased from a tannery a large pile of compost, hair, ashes, lime and other refuse, with enough bark in layers to make all pile up well. In the winter we drew this on land devoted to nursery and other crops, usually plowing it under in the spring. Sometimes on fall plowed land we would incorporate the mixture with the soil, by the use of the cultivator or share harrow, in the spring.

One of the things that vividly impressed me as we drew here and plants from soil thus manured was the way in which rootlets would lay hold of congenial bits of plant food. The tufts and felted knots of hair would be the attraction to a mass of small roots. This is illustrated in the accompanying sketch, in which a a a show bunches of hair. This thing was seen not only in the case of seedling and tree roots, but also in those of strawberry plants, which lie much nearer the surface.

A lesson to be drawn from this is that the plowing in of manure as a method of applying it should not yield to surface applications in any marked degree. The activity with which roots seek out and lay hold of particles of manure in the case stated showed to me that there can be no mistake in putting the plant food right where it will be needed. With the surface and application of manure in the fall and winter there is often great loss of fertility through escape by leaching and surface drainage during thaws in the winter. For drawn on the plat and be kept in piles until just before spring plowing or cultivating, such loss is not appreciable.

The question of the comparative merits of surface manuring and the plowing in of manure may depend somewhat on the crop also. It is plain in the case of shallow rooted crops, like lettuce, radishes, onions, strawberries, etc., that the manure is not wanted at the same level as with parsnips, cauliflower and other deeper rooters. Then, again, surface manuring may, as in the case of strawberries, serve an excellent purpose as a mulch in keeping the soil cool and in preserving moisture.



A LESSON IN MANURING.

Another thing, all crops do not need the same amount of manure. It is a poor plan, for instance, to be lavish in the use of manure on potatoes and then slight it on onions and celery. Among crops that do the better for high feeding I would place strawberries, celery, onions, lettuce, spinach, beets, radishes, cabbage, cauliflower, squashes and cucumbers. Of such, the extent of the crop is almost measured by the amount of manure, and 30 to 40 tons per acre each year is none too much. The bush small fruits need less manure than do strawberries, while vegetables, potatoes, peas, parsnips, carrots, beans, tomatoes and melons get along very well with one-half the manure called for by the others named.

Sugar Maple Trees.

The demand the last few years for maple sugar has been such as to warrant improved methods. The maple sugar worker of today is practical and modern. If he is the owner of a bush of 500 or 600 trees he can clear all the way from $300 to $500 a season. This is more than three times as much as the owner of 25 years ago made during the same period. It is claimed that a good maple tree will pay for itself in a couple of tappings, and in the course of a few years it will pay for itself in sugar over and above what is usually bring for timber many times over. The consequence is, farmers are no longer anxious to cut down their hard maples and sell them for timber. In planting a sugar orchard care is taken to select only the broad leaf hard maple and straight young trees, trees sprung from the seed as often as possible, and not saplings grown from an old stump. These make the best sugar producers, according to an authority which tells that there are many degrees of maples, hybrids between the soft maple and the hard maple. They are all good sap producers, but the sap produced but little sugar. A soft maple tree will deliver twice as much sap as a hard maple, but it will not make one-quarter as much sugar, and what it does produce is of inferior quality.

Crops For Green Manuring.

Country Gentleman says: "We have used crimson clover, peas and barley for cover crops with great success. Barley stands the hot weather of August and September better than oats. We have also used rye to a limited extent. These various crops may be sown in the corn or on the inverted barley or oat stubble and either rye or wheat drilled in on the potato ground, although the field may not be clear until the first to the middle of October."

OLD LIBERALS DISAPPOINTED.

The Huntington Gleaner is one of the ablest and most reliable Liberal party journals published in the Province of Quebec. It has no hesitation in expressing its deep disappointment over the fact that the new Liberal Government in Ottawa fails to carry out in office those measures of economy and retrenchment so strongly demanded when in opposition. Last week the Gleaner wrote as follows:

In failing to reduce the expenditure, the disappointment has been complete. As a rule, where an official has been relieved, his office has been filled, and the sole change has been from a Conservative leech to a Liberal leech. The Government has failed to reform itself, and continues the superfluity of the ministers which Sir John Macdonald and his successors fastened upon the country. It is not so easy to write calmly of the Government's continuing the system of subsidies to railways. It is to that system the enormous debt of the Dominion is due, and it is to that system the low tone of our public morality may be traced. The Liberals of this sort, and the Gleaner's confession is that unless a speedy change is made in their policy, they themselves will lose that independent support to which their success at the polls was due.

A SHORTER ATLANTIC LINE.

Mr. P. T. McGrath, editor of the St. Johns, Newfoundland, Evening Herald, contributes an interesting paper to the June number of the Canadian Magazine regarding a new line of travel between Great Britain and Canada, which is now nearly completed. A railway is being built from St. Johns, the easterly part of Newfoundland, to Port-Aux-Basques, on the west coast, and will be completed and in operation in a few weeks. The latter port is only four hours run by a fast steamer from Cape Breton, where passengers will be landed on our Canadian railway trains, with no further dangers of a sea voyage, or of sea sickness. From St. John's to Liverpool the sailing distance is over a thousand miles less than from either New York or Boston. The real ocean sailing time required between St. Johns and Liverpool, with one of the ordinary 20 knots an hour steamers will be but 84 hours, or less than three days and a half against over six days to New York. The most dangerous parts of the ocean voyage, it is claimed, will be also thus avoided.

Passengers and mails to any part of Canada or to Chicago, or anywhere in the great north western States will be conveyed in about three days and with far less risk. Even to New York or Boston the saving will be some 28 to 36 hours. Passengers will enjoy, too, the variety of railway trip through the Maritime Provinces, across Newfoundland, and the pleasant ferry-like sail from the latter Island to Cape Breton. When a fast ocean steamer is being completed to make the round trips between Cape Breton and Newfoundland, which can easily be done every day, and with but very little discomfort. Before this season is over the experiments will be in practical operation. Its projectors are sanguine that a very great change will thus be effected in the line of travel between Great Britain and America, and particularly in the line of through travel between the East and the Pacific ocean and China and Japan beyond.

Canada is greatly interested in this new project, and we shall watch with interest its success. It is claimed that our Canadian fast Atlantic steam-ships will yet adopt that route, both as regards mails and passengers.

Sun of Prosperity Shines.

A YEAR AGO HADN'T TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

Correspondence Toronto World.

Montreal, July 1.—"They tell you I am a Scodder. Eighteen months ago I hadn't twenty-five cents to my name to-day." These words were spoken by the Hon J. Israel Tarte to the electors of St. Johns' just one year ago. Things have changed since then. A few months ago ex-Alderman Dubuc died, leaving unfinished a magnificent cut stone residence on Sherbrooke street. Not long since the Minister of Public Works offered Madame Dubuc $25,000 cash for the house, it being understood that he would have to spend $10,000 more before being able to occupy the palatial residence in question. As Mr. Tarte is a "jolly good fellow," his friends are delighted to know that the sun of financial prosperity shines continuously upon him. The St. Francois Xavier street brokers say Mr. Tarte has been exceedingly lucky in his investments of late, and they hope that he will yet remain at the house, for which $30,000 is now asked.

LOCAL and GENERAL.

The estimate of Chicago's population by the publishers of the city directory is 1,828,000, an increase of 76,000 over last year.

The total amount of railway subsidies voted this session by the Dominion Parliament is $4,336,687, of which $2,179 560 consists of reserves.

Mgr. Merry del Val has written a letter to Archbishop Langevin, in which he states that the Pope is now in possession of all the information regarding the school question, and the agitation and discussion of the matter must cease pending the Holy Father's judgment.

Lightning struck the barn and shed of the Royal Hotel at Arthur, killing Mr. Clark, a Fergus farmer, who was in the shed.

During a storm, Monday, Mr. Chas. Allen, of Ellice Township, and a number of others took refuge under a raised barn. The wind blew the building over on them and Mr. Allen was killed.

At Tecumseh, lightning struck Mr. Paul Maynard while working in a hayfield, killing him instantly, also stunning his father to such an extent that he cannot live more than a few hours, and instantly killing the team of horses and shivering the waggon to atoms.

THE WARDEN NOMINATED.

At the meeting of the Reform Association of the County of Lennox, in the Town Hall, yesterday afternoon, Bowen E. Aylsworth, Esq., Warden of the County, was unanimously chosen as the standard bearer of the party at the next election. Mr. Aylsworth was a candidate in 1893, but was defeated by our popular representative, Dr. Meacham. The Liberals have chosen their strongest man, and a hot contest may be looked for.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

He Didn't Like It.

YENNACHAN, Ont., July 1st, 1897.

Dear Mr. Editor,—

Allow me space in your valuable paper to write a few lines upon "What I saw and heard in the Immigration." I noticed an advertisement in THE BEAVER that the firemen of Napanee would run a moonlight excursion to Glenora and Picton, and having occasion to go to Picton I thought it would be a good opportunity for me to go, as I would have an hour there. I consequently drove to Napanee, sent my horse back and purchased my ticket, having sent a card ahead notifying my friends of my intention. Well, I boarded the steamer and went to the cabin door and was met by an aged lady (maiden lady I should judge) who informed me that no men were allowed in that apartment, as they had been troubled with smoking. After I assured her that I would not smoke and told her my occupation she readily consented to allow me in. As the steamer sailed up the bay several others came in who were quiet and orderly, but the noise overhead was something terrible to listen to. They call it the light fantastic, but it was anything but light, I can assure you, for several times I thought the lamp would fall to the floor. Now, Mr. Editor, I have been among shantymen and the roughest class of men, but I never heard them make more noise than that crowd. They screamed and yelled at the very top of their voices. We, however, arrived at Glenora where the mad orgy of the crowd remained, and I heard there was a row took place there. The remainder of the crowd went on to Picton. We remained one hour and then started on our homeward journey. When we returned to Glenora I saw a little skirmish upon the shore indulged in by a few men. The crowd again boarded the steamer and we started on our way to Napanee again. I saw several come into the cabin, (boys and girls. They came in like they did into the ark, (two by two). I saw them get in the corners and sit around the seats and indulge in softness of the worst kind. They were so demonstrative in their affections as to throw their arms around one another's necks, and some put hats up before their faces and indulged in a little sweetness, a disgrace to society. We arrived safely at the city wharf of Napanee river, where the boat stuck fast, but after some work we were loosened and arrived safely in Napanee. I can assure you, Mr. Editor, that was the first trip of that kind I ever indulged in, and that it shall be the last.

Thanking you for your space, I am yours,

J. M. W.

The Friday Half Holiday.

Editor BEAVER.—A short time ago an effort was made to get the Napanee business men to take action regarding a Friday half holiday during the months of July and August. All or nearly all in every branch of business were seen, and at once fell in with the idea, and it was supposed that we were about to enjoy weekly a few hours of rest and fresh air, when lo and behold, some one said "No, I will keep my shop open; I have some customers that come in on Friday to keep clear of the rush on Saturday, and they must be accommodated." Of course none of the rest of us have Friday customers to look after! The fact is we give our country customers too much credit and respect to think that they would begrudge us the weekly half holiday, but rather say, "We will assist you in it; shut up your shop by all means; come out in the country and rest us, and we will do our best to make it pleasant for you." We (I say we, for the writer has been in the trade fifteen years) know something about the close confinement, the late hours on Saturday night, and the worry and selling on Sunday morning, that is so often made an excuse for staying away from church, and which might not be so if we could get out into the fresh air a little during the week. We sincerely hope that the firm that has blocked the Friday half holiday will change their minds and agree with the rest of us a few hours outing each week during the heated term.

Yours truly, JOHN DOE,
Grocer.

A Valuable Herd

Dear Sir.—The question has been often asked, "Will the Holstein cow give more milk with ordinary treatment than any other breed?" The only way to find out is by comparing notes with our neighbors whose treatment is similar, and to secure the desired information I have tested five out of my herd of eighteen and give you the result. I may here state that these cows travel each day over six miles on a rough road going to and from the pasture, and had nothing to eat except what they picked. The test was commenced on the 1st day of June and ended on the 30th of June.

One, two years old, gave 7284.
One, three years old, gave 9265.
One, four years old, gave 1,341.
One, five years old, gave 1,2484.
One, six years old, gave 1310.

You will naturally conclude that these are the best I had, and I thought so when the test began, but during the month I found several others that were giving more milk. Now, Mr. Editor, I would not have you think they are pure bred. They are not but range in grade from ¼ to ⅞. They are all being bred to Jacob Prescott, No. 1030, Vol. 3, H.F.H.B., and should you or any of the subscribers to your valuable paper desire to purchase calves next spring you can do so by placing your order early.

W. H. CARMAN,

KINGSTON PRESBYTERY.

The quarterly meeting of the Presbytery of Kingston was held here, (Napanee), on Tuesday, 6th July, Rev. D. G. McPhail, Moderator, presiding.

There were present Messrs. Wilkins, Houston, Gallagher, A. McDonald, J. Gandier, McTavish, Ballantyne, Peck, Clayton, Martin, McKay, Shore, ministers, and Jones, Birrell, Gilmour and Kiel elders.

The Rev. J. Shore was elected Moderator for the next six months.

The following standing committees were appointed:

LIST OF STANDING COMMITTEES.

Home Missions—Rev. M. W. Maclean, Convener, and with him Messrs. Gracey, Boyd, Moore and Bennie, Ministers; Messrs. Birrell, Hudson, Mackintosh and Dyer, Elders.

Examination of Students—Rev. M. MacGillivray, Convener, and with him Messrs. Mackie, Houston, Boyd and Prof. Fowler, together with the representative elders of Kingston Sessions.

Sabbath Schools—Rev. W. W. Peck, Convenor, and with him Messrs Fairlie, McPhail, Gallagher and Martin, Ministers; Messrs. Ostrom, R. G. Birrell, Templeton and Hicks, Elders.

Church Life and Work—Rev. J. Machie, Convenor, and with him Messrs. Cumberland, McArthur, Claxton, Ministers; Messrs. N. D. McArthur, Hopkins and W. G. Maxwell, Elders.

Augmentation—Rev. S. Houston, Convenor, and with him Messrs. MacGillivray, Thompson, Peck and Laird, Ministers; Messrs. Adams, Craig, Urquhart and Jones, Elders.

Statistics and Finance—The Clerk of Presbytery Convenor, and with him Messrs. Gracey, Boyd, Johnston, and Gandier, Ministers; Messrs. Casquet, Hall, McKeighn, and Adams, Elders.

Y. P. Societies—Rev. W. S. McTavish, Convenor, and with him Messrs. Black, McKay, Fleming and Ballantyne, Ministers, Messrs. Brownlee, Truesdale, Boulter, and McIntosh, Elders.

Aged and Infirm Ministers—Messrs. Cumberland, Gracey and McPhail, Ministers; Messrs. Gilles, Rathbun, and W. G. Craig, Elders.

Appointments to visit mission fields were left in the hands of H. M. committee.

Mr. Houston submitted report of committee on Augmentation, and the following were appointed to visit augmented congregations: Tweed, Messrs. McTavish and Jones; Harrowsmith and Wilton, Messrs. Peck and Birrell; Amherst Island, Messrs. McGillivray and Russell; Newburgh, Messrs. McLean and Hudson; Trenton, Messrs. Thompson and Templeton; Roslin and Thurlow, Messrs. Moore and Burns; Zion Church, Kingston, Messrs. Laird and McIntyre; Pittsburg, Messrs. Gracey and Gillies.

Last year only $633 was raised for augmentation within the bounds of this Presbytery. The Presbytery aims at raising not less than $1,000 for the current year.

A petition from Tamworth asking for separation from Camden V., was laid over till the September meeting.

Reports of visitations to stated supplies were being taken for the erection of a church at Fuller. The Presbytery expressed its gratification and commended the work.

A proposal for co operation with the Methodist church in mission work at Plevna was referred to the H. M. committee.

Mr. Bruce Kiel reported the work being done at Collinsby and the organization of a Sunday school there. The Presbytery expressed its gratification with the progress of the work.

Mr. Herbison, who had finished his studies as a student for the ministry, being present, was duly licensed as a preacher of the gospel.

The Presbytery adjourned to meet in St. Andrew's church, Kingston, on the third Tuesday of September next, at 2 p.m.

Aggie, the Babcock Test.

WRITTEN FOR FARMER GRUMBLE.

"I believe I'll strike," said Farmer Grumble;
"his country's going to rumble;
It ain't no place for me to stay
If yer ign'rant let cheesemakers have all th' say.
Such works ain't ways is too much for me—
Cheese makers can't let the farmer be.
An' the women folk think they want to vote,
An' drive out whole sections of their boys can't soak;
The men are mad on cheese an' butter,
It's enough to drive a man to the gutter—
I'm a-tellin' ye, I've become real dargled mi'serf
Since I moved from away on my farm.
An' there ain't a neighbor that knows to-day
Every livered newfangled notions anyway—
Since we started in to be won't let go for—
I'm a-tellin' ye, I've become real sore.
Why, matter that a perfect person
Can't be born to with Babcock's test,
Or like cream or our cheese an fast
It's worth five or six cents to the best
Than it is to the rest.
Why, I've got that old Babcock test
Down in my cellar, I'll have you to know,
An' there ain't a neighbor that knows to-day
But what I'm a-tellin' him every day
Every time I meet him or he meets me—
Why, I'm a-tellin' him, I'm a-tellin' him,
I'm a-tellin' him about the test.
Why, matter that a perfect person
Can't be born to with Babcock's test,
Or like cream or our cheese an fast
It's worth five or six cents to the best
Than it is to the rest.
Why, I've got that old Babcock test
Down in my cellar, I'll have you to know,
An' there ain't a neighbor that knows to-day
But what I'm a-tellin' him every day
Every time I meet him or he meets me—
Why, I'm a-tellin' him, I'm a-tellin' him,
I'm a-tellin' him about the test.

A Matter of Justice

IS THE WAY A YOUNG LADY OF NEW BRUNSWICK VIEWS IT.

Suffered From Headaches, Pain in the Side and Heart Palpitation—She Thinks Similar Sufferers Should Know How she Found a Cure.

From the Fredericton Gleaner.

Miss Alma Millar, of Upper Southampton, N. B., is a daughter of Mr. Leo A. Millar, a wealthy and influential farmer, and the young lady is a general favorite among a wide circle of acquaintances, who have had occasion to congratulate her upon her complete restoration to health after a severe and trying illness. When a correspondent of the Gleaner called upon her, and requested that the facts might be given for publication, the young lady, though not at all anxious for publicity, nevertheless gave her consent in the hope that her experience might prove beneficial to some of the many young girls whose condition of health is very similar to what her's was previous to her cure. Miss Millar stated that when her illness began her mother was unable to look after the affairs of the household and the duties largely devolved upon her. She felt herself growing weak and easily tired, but felt that she must keep up. She says: "Notwithstanding my efforts I found myself going backward instead. My appetite failed, my complexion became sallow and my eyes sunken in my head. I was troubled with dizziness, shortness of breath and palpitation of the heart until at times I felt as though I would suffocate. I was almost constantly troubled with a pain in the side, and severe headaches. When I went up-stairs I was easily distressed. I had to come almost a burden and at last I was forced to give up and keep my bed. My friends feared I was going into consumption. One doctor after another was tried with no beneficial results until I was induced to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial. In less than three weeks I was able to leave my bed and go about the house, and the use of the Pink Pills a few weeks longer completely restored my health and strength and drove away all symptoms and pains which had made my life so miserable. I feel that in bringing this matter before the public I am but doing simple justice to suffering humanity and I hope that those afflicted as I was will give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial. I might also add that other members of our family have used Pink Pills with equally good results."

What Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for Miss Millar, they will do for thousands of other young girls throughout the country, whose condition is similar. They restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks, correct functional derangements, and create a feeling of new life and energy. The genuine Pink Pills are sold only in boxes, the wrapper around which bears the full trade mark, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People." Refuse all pink colored imitations and other medicines said to be "just as good."

FROM BATH TO SUTTON.

DEAR BEAVER—At our first call at our new postoffice address we were greeted by our old time friend, THE BEAVER, and this at once gave us a sort of home feeling. We find ourselves frequently wondering what our acquaintances of Lennox & Addington are all doing, and at least until we get to know our new environment we shall look with much expectancy for the arrival of one of the most enterprising of local newspapers—to us the "home paper"—THE NAPANEE BEAVER.

Being trans-ferred from the Bay of Quinte into the Montreal Conference and stationed by the Ottawa Conference at Sutton, Brome County, Que., we found in our removing that we had all together a journey of some two hundred and sixty miles. If one were about this would be a little holiday jaunt, but with library and other parsonage effects and eleven outfit, and wife and children, it might at least pass for a good old-time Methodist move. As we were going into a new land and the way was nearly all new to all but one of our party, we determined to combine pleasure with business and make the best of everything.

Monday evening, June 21st, say us leaving the good Str. Alexandria, at Finkle's dock, Bath, having taken tea with our friends, the Finkles, as the last enjoyment of Bath's hospitality. Once aboard, the whistle blew and amid the waving of handkerchiefs we moved off until people and dock faded in the distance—three years of association in work being ended. Only as we lost sight of the friends on the shore did we fully realize this, and as of one mind found that her emotions would no longer be restrained. Night soon closed in and we found our way to our state rooms to await the beautiful St. Lawrence sail of the next day.

When we awakened in the early morning of the 22nd we were at Prescott and heard the bells of the town ringing while flags were visible in various directions in honor of the Queen's Diamond Jubilee. We were much interested here, first in the river ferry boat, which carried three railway cars across to Ogdensburgh on its one trip, and secondly, in the unloading from our boat of two monster engines and various boxes of sawing and sundry pipes and tubes and a driver attending them all, who would use them in diving for the purpose of lifting a sunken vessel. Our rule from this point to Montreal is simply indescribable for its grandeur. Many of our young Canadians know little of the magnificence of scenery which belongs to this noble land. Perhaps for instance, would amply repay young people for a whole year of sacrifices in other directions. And what shall I say of the St. Lawrence, Montreal and Sutton? The local excursions to our uncles and cousins might well be abandoned for a year or two and the money more wisely expended on an educative trip to Montreal and Sutton. Of course it is in no such a trip that we receive our first experiences of the power of the rapids, for the Iroquois, and the Ocean and the Cedar rapids and the Lachine hurry us rapidly on. And how we watched the pilot! What expressions of decision and firmness and responsibility marked his countenance. When we had reached Montreal we find that he really could smile, but before that his face revealed no such weakness. One of the remarkable facts on this route is seen at the junction of the Ottawa River with the St. Lawrence, where the former comes in as a dark brown stream uniting but not mixing with the sea-going river, and journeying on in company with, it keeping its own distinctness. Two of the works of art that especially interested me were the sections of the Canada Atlantic and C. P. R. bridges, crossing the St. Lawrence at Cotean and Lachine respectively. The section of the C. P. R., through which we passed, opened by turning on a central pier as on a huge pivot, and was apparently manipulated by but one hand. The Canada bridge is on a different principle. As we approached it, it appeared like a huge half-hoop, the two ends of which had been fixed together so as to increase the height of the arch. Then as we passed through a weight was seen descending a pole and resting on the arch, evidently forcing it down until it came to a level with the rest of the bridge, and in like manner the ends were forced out until they touched the piers at either side and united thus the rail track. We had the satisfaction of witnessing this and seeing a train pass over. Our ship was too heavily freighted to make the de-cent of the Lachine rapids at all safe, much to our disappointment, so we had a ride of nine miles through the Lachine canal to Montreal, where we arrived at nine o'clock. It was still time to take a street car and ride up Notre Dame to Lawrence, and lesser streets to the foot of the Mountain, thence returning down St. James and witnessing the illumination of the Mountain, La Presse printing house, the Bank of Montreal and Victoria Square, the Grand Trunk Depot and all the minor places of business. The illuminations were as much beyond our expectations as I presume Lonton's were beyond those of Montreal. We spent one day in Montreal, sight-seeing having, the advantage of our own horse and buggy with which to climb hills and go where we will. Our nights were spent on the Alexandria, where we found everything so tasteful and comfortable that we were loath to leave it and much preferred it to a hotel. We most heartily commend the Alexandria, her genial captain, obliging officers and crew to all travelers.

The last stage in our journey was made by train, the weather one day proving too warm, and the next too rainy for driving. Thursday, therefore, at noon found us arrived at the C. P. R. station of Sutton, where we were welcomed by the Rev. J. H. Fowler, a superannuated minister and one of our parishioners. Perhaps my letter is already too long, and yet must I not say something of Sutton? The village, recently incorporated, is in a valley between two spurs of the Green Mountains, of Vermont. The "45" as the people say here, that is the national boundary line, is not more than seven miles away. The scenery here is delightful, the people very pleasant and sociable and the work of a character that offers much encouragement in its possibilities of growth. Last evening I attended and addressed a lawn social in connection with the Anglican church of the village, the pastor himself having called for and escorted me to the gathering. That itself speaks volumes for the place. I shall not stop to describe the place any more than to say that Sutton is one of the live places in Canada, and no person who comes here will be disappointed. We have the Scott Act in force. About the only thing I see that we haven't at present is a printing office. Best wishes to you all, Mr. Editor. W. BOWMAN TUCKER.

This Hot Weather

YOU ARE PHYSICALLY AND MENTALLY EXHAUSTED

Paine's Celery Compound is the Great Builder and Recuperator.

As a rule there is no pain following physical and mental exhaustion and debility.

You know you are weak, faint, languid, have loss of memory, depression of spirits, with a wasting of flesh. Your troubles proceed simply from nervous exhaustion, and though you are in suffering pain and agony, be assured your condition is extremely perilous and demands immediate attention.

That watchful, great life force that runs to every part of the body supplying the most minute nerves and tissues, is fast and poisoned. In your present condition your blood is not a life stream; it is a stagnant pool of disease and death.

The healthy, hale and strong, that bear up during the hottest weather, and that are blessed with clear, pure blood and steady nerves, are the people who make use of Paine's Celery Compound, the only medicine that revitalizes the blood, that fortifies the nervous system that gives perfect digestive power, sound sleep, and a new lease of life to those advanced in years.

Paine's Celery Compound is truly the great modern elixir of life, and no wonder that doctors approve of it and strongly recommend it.

Why go on in such wretchedness and misery when such a magic power for health, vigor and a new life? We recommend you no untried remedy. Every bottle of Paines Celery Compound guaranteed to do the work it promises. There is health and life in every drop.

THE BIG MINING STRIKE

THE ORDER TO QUIT WORK IS BEING OBEYED.

About Two Hundred Thousand Men Affected—Deserted Coal Mines in the Illinois District.

Pittsburg, Pa., July 5.—The great struggle of the coal miners was inaugurated throughout the Pittsburg district to-day, but it will be impossible to tell anything about the true situation before to-morrow, as this is a general holiday and work is suspended in all the mines of the district. This was a day of mass meetings. Meetings were held in nearly every mining settlement that was represented at Saturday's convention in this city, and the miners were implored not to falter in the great struggle that has begun. What effect the meetings will have cannot be determined until Tuesday morning. When it is learned just how many men refuse to go to work, then the magnitude of the great strike will manifest itself.

In speaking of the strike, President Bolan said: "The coming week will be a busy one. I have every reason to believe that with the exception of a very few mines the suspension will begin. The men realize that this is the fight of their lives, and from the expressions of determination I hear on all sides, I have every reason to believe the strike will be successful."

"How long will it last?"

"That is a difficult question to answer. But of one thing you can rest assured: We are in good condition to stay out all summer. By good shape I mean that we have warm weather and a prospective big demand for lake trade coal in sight, which makes the time much more favorable for a strike. There is an erroneous impression that by reason of so many industries being shut down there will be little demand for coal. It is not generally known that the supply of coal for the manufacturers in the Pittsburg district is but a drop in the bucket when compared with the lake trade, which supplies the market where coal mines are practically unknown."

Morris, Ill., July 5.—In compliance with the general order, all miners in the Wilmington coal fields, including all Grundy county mines, went on strike to-day. The Braceville miners decided to square up places, refusing, however, to load coal. Some Italians at Carbon Hill refused to strike, and in consequence a riot ensued, partially operated to-day. Other mines have practically been on strike several days. The siege promises to be a long one.

TURKS CAPTURE KALABAKA

The Village Pillaged and Destroyed After a Stubborn Fight.

Athens, July 6.—The Turkish troops, after a sharp fight with the inhabitants, have captured the village of Kalabaka, although within the territory occupied by the Turkish troops, was under Greek administration. The attack was made last Thursday by a body of Turks and Albanians, 2,000 strong. The inhabitants fought desperately, killing many of the Turks, but were finally overpowered. Most of them fled to the mountains. The others have probably been massacred. Ten taken prisoners. The Turks, after pillaging the town, destroyed it.

Constantinople, July 5.—The Sultan now shows signs of yielding on the question of the rectifications of the Turkish frontier. The Ambassadors expect negotiations for peace will be resumed to-day or Tuesday, when it is hoped everything will be settled in accordance with the views of Europe.

LATEST MARKET REPORTS.

Toronto, July 6.

BREADSTUFFS.

Wheat—The offerings are fair, there is a moderate demand and the market is steady at 66c for red and 67c for white north and west. Manitoba wheat is about a cent lower. A round lot of No. 1 hard sold to-day at 71½c afloat Fort William to go to New York. No. 1 hard is quoted at 72c to 73c Goderich and No. 2 hard at 73 to 74c there.

Flour—Is dull and easy. Cars of straight roller are quoted at $3 20 to $3.25 west. Manitoba flour steady at $4.20 to $4.25 for patents and $3 80 for strong bakers' here.

Millfeed—Is quiet at $9.50 for shorts and $8.50 for bran west.

Barley—Is nominal at 46c for No. 1, 26c for No. 2, 24c for No. 3 extra and 22 to 23c for feed outside.

Buckwheat—Nominal at 29 to 31c east.

Rye—Steady at 40c east.

Corn—Steady at 23½ to 24c for yellow west.

Oats—Are steady. Mixed are quoted at 21c north and west, 19,000 bushels white sold north and west to-day at 22c.

Peas—Are steady, 5,000 bushels sold at 41c middle freight to-day.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

Butter—The receipts are fair, the local demand is moderate and prices are steady at 11c to 12c for dairy tub, the latter for choice.

Eggs—Are in fair demand and steady at 9½ to 10c.

Poultry—Is in moderate demand and steady at 50 to 60c for chickens and 5 to 10c for turkeys.

Potatoes—Are quiet. Cars of old are quoted at 50c and they sell out of store at 55 to 60c. New are jobbing at $3.50 per barrel.

Baled Hay—Is slow at $9 to $10 for cars here of good choice.

Baled Straw—Is at $5 to $5.25 for cars here.

CHEESE MARKETS.

Perth, July 5.—One thousand two hundred boxes of cheese were bought into the Perth cheese market to-day, all white. Ruling price paid, 7½ to 8c. Three buyers from Montreal firms were present.

Iroquois, July 5.—At the Cheese Board to-day 65 boxes colored and 85 white were offered. Highest bid, 8c. No sales on board.

Brantford, July 5.—At the cheese market to-day 4,423 boxes June cheese were boarded. Sales, 1,071 boxes at 8c, 1,633 at 8 1-16c. Owing to changes in train service the market will be held in future at 5 p.m. instead of 3 p.m.

LIVE STOCK MARKETS.

Toronto, July 6.—Trade was only fair at the Toronto cattle market to-day. The receipts were pretty heavy, being 65 cars, including 1,000 hogs, 700 sheep and lambs, 75 calves and 20 milch cows and springers. The buying of cattle for Montreal and Buffalo was slow, about 14 cars of butchers' cattle being taken for Montreal and 22 cars of stockers for Buffalo.

Export Cattle—Trade was quiet and prices are unchanged. Cables continue weak, there being a lot of American cattle on the British markets. The ruling prices paid here were 3¾ to 4¼c per lb., and for some extra $4.40 to $4.75 was paid. Buyers bought slowly, preferring to get their cattle in Chicago, where the class is said to be better and the rate from there to Montreal is as low as from Toronto to Montreal. All sold before the close.

Butchers' Cattle—There are very few choice offered and fair prices were obtained for the best. The supply of grasseers was large, and that gives the market a weak tone, as it helps to depress the prices of stall-fed cattle. Prices ruled from 2 3-8 to 3c for common, 3 to 3¼c for medium and 3½ to 3¾c for good to choice. A few loads of poor cattle were left unsold at the close.

Bulls—Only a few choice for export are wanted at 3¾ to 4¼c.

Stockers—Quiet at 2¾ to 3¼c.

Feeders—Some were bought to put on the grass at 2¾ to 3c, the latter being almost ready for the market.

Milch Cows and Springers—All offered were quickly sold at $20 to $36 each.

Sheep—There was a fair demand for export, prices ruling from 3 to 3½c for ordinary and 3¾c for extra choice ewes and wethers. Bucks ruled at 2¾ to 3c.

Lambs—Good ones are wanted and the market is firm at $3 to $3.50 each. A few extra choice bring $3.75.

Calves—Steady at $4 to $6 each. Good ones are wanted. Occasionally an extra choice veal sold at $7. Some of the poor calves were sold for whatever they would fetch.

Hogs—Offerings are fair and the market was steady at 5¼c for choice selections, light fat 5c thick fat too plentiful and not wanted. They sold at $4.75 to $4.80. Sows firm at 3½ to 3¾c, stags, 2 to 2½c; stores not wanted.

UNITED STATES MARKETS.

East Buffalo, July 6.—Cattle—Receipts, 2 cars; prices were not as strong as those prevailing at the opening of the week or on sales made since Monday, the bulk of the supply being cow and heifer stock. Hogs—Receipts, about 34 cars, prices lower, but at the decline the demand was fair; good weight Yorkers, $3.60; mixed packers' grades, $3.57 to $3.60; medium weights, $3.55; heavy hogs, $3.50; roughs, $3 to $3.30. Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 9 cars and 34 cars that held over; the market was active at the opening for a few lots of spring lambs and yearlings, but sheep were neglected, and before noon a weaker feeling prevailed for both springers and yearlings; native yearlings, choice to prime, $4 60 to $4.70; good to choice, common to good, $3.75 to $4.25; culls to common yearlings, $3.25 to $3.50; export yearling wethers, $4.60 to $4.90; spring lambs, $4.50 to $6.25; fair to choice mixed sheep, $3.50 to $3.80; culls and common sheep, $2.50 to $3.50; export sheep, $3.75 to $4.25.

GOOD COOKERY

Strawberry Shortcake No. 2.—One quart of flour, an even tablespoonful of salt, four tab espoonfuls of sugar, two of butter and one of lard. Rub all these into the flour, add three heaping teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Beat two eggs light, then add to mixture milk enough to make a soft dough (about one pint). Divide, roll out and put in a buttered baking pan; cover thick with butter; roll out other half and place on top of first layer. Bake about twenty-five minutes in a quick oven; when done slide out on a bread board; when cool separate the layers. Place bottom layer on plate and cover thickly with strawberries sprinkled with pulverized sugar; put on top layer and cover with berries neatly arranged. Sprinkle with sugar. To be eaten with plenty of cream.

NEW CANDLE SHADES.

EVOLUTION OF THE SHADE—LATEST IN CANDLESTICKS.

An Effective Combination Fernery and Candle Holder—Moorish, Jeweled and Other Up to Date Candle Shades—Quaint Candlesticks of Silver, Brass and Iron.

The innovation of the pretty candle accessories known as shades was, of course, a woman's invention. As rumor has it, evening after evening one of society's favorites sat chafing at the crude yellow flame of the numerous candles, feeling that every line in her face was being revealed with unbecoming distinctness. Finally an inspiration came. She procured silk and bristol board and covered the shade, which is now a necessity for candles for the banquet table, the parlor, or wherever a soft, effective light is desired.

In a sketch of the very latest styles in candle shades The Standard Designer illustrates some pretty up to date table decoratiuns, including a combination fernery and candelabra for the center or side pieces of a table.

A rose pink candle springs from a half opened cluster of ferns in shining silver which contrasts well with the deep pink of the silk shade. The candle holder is securely attached to an oval fernery which forms the base of this attractive decoration. The flower holders on either side are of rose colored glass, with silver ornaments. The shade in this instance is perhaps one of the easiest to manufacture and may be of crape paper or of silk. Ice crape is also very pretty for this style of work, as it is crinkly and has almost an accordion plaited effect. The metal candle shade fixtures or holders can be bought at the stores for 10 cents. If the holder only is in use, bristol board or hat wire must be used to mount the shade. First make a ring of wire the exact size of the round top of the candle holder. Then form another ring considerably larger than the first. Four pieces of wire, about 4 or 5 inches long, should then be attached to the upper and lower rings, much after the order of an umbrella's ribs. Having completed this skeleton frame, gather the silk top and bottom and attach it to the wire rings.

When transparent fabrics, such as chiffon or mousseline de soie, are employed for the shades, they should be mounted on very thin bristol board cut circular in shape and joined in the back by tiny brass headed nails.

An effective candlestick is one of silver with leaflike decoration. It is crowned by a shade of Moorish design. This shade is made of satin covered cardboard painted in a scroll design and thickly set with small imitation gems. The fringe ornamenting the edge is composed entirely of crystal beads in every imaginable color. This shade, as may be imagined, is one of the most beautiful of those imported this year, and yet it may be made very easily.

Another odd candlestick is of wrought iron and brass. A shade of scarlet satin, enriched with colored jewels and outlined with gold thread, makes a glittering and appropriate capping for the red candle, which is held in place by the brazen ball of a diminutive dragon. A very handsome one is a candlestick of filigree brass, with its shade of cerise china silk, cut in deep points and shirred on a foundation of coarse, stiff crinoline. The bust edge is surrounded by a fringe of beadwork. Clever women will make numerous variations, modifications and additions, with the aid of the foregoing models.

ODD AND UP TO DATE.

Field Peas.

Professor Shaw of the Minnesota station is credited with saying that the Prussian Blue pea is possessed of a wider adaptation than any other varieties of peas grown and should be united to New England. For the west he names a variety known as the green field pea; also another variety called the green or gray pea. The Chancellor is mentioned as being a popular variety in the northwest.

DR. JACK'S WIFE

By ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Author of "Dr. Jack," "Captain Tom," "Miss Caprice," Etc., Etc.

...ncle, mother, waiting. ... hurry. I have hired ... to St. Louis ahead of ... means much to me ... certain house ... of this train who ... can could you have worn that hat here and I never noticed it?"

Larry claps it on his head. The chaperon comes down to his ears, and Jack laughs.

"I'd look ridiculous, wouldn't I now, with such a head-piece on? Not quite such a fool, dear boy, if I do look it."

"But why did you bring it here?"

"Excuse me, Jack, I deny the soft insinuation; I'm not in the hat business just at present."

"Eh? then who brought it here?" stirring up, with something of sudden interest.

"That's what I want to know, by Jove!"

"Where did you get it?"

"Found it on a seat in the car, or wather hanging on a book."

Doctor Jack turns his eyes from the military chapeau until the sweet Larry's gaze.

He does not seem disturbed in the least. It is not his way to show his feelings, and yet the truth that surges through his brain is of a character that might alarm any one.

"I remember now," he says, slowly, "that when those men passed us Colonel Garcia certainly wore his hat, for he ironically bowed to Avis. Your finding it here proves one thing—those men were not heading for the restaurant."

Larry nods his head wisely.

"That is so," he says.

"They got wind of our plans—knew we had a special pre-engaged car—their own plans might miscarry, and came here to take advantage of our forethought. Perhaps they sighted us coming through the depot, and took such a hasty retreat that our colonel forgot his head-gear."

Again Larry wags his head as though he agrees with his companion.

"The question that arises now is of great importance to us. Did those men in their hasty retreat give up their captured property here, or are they still secreted about the car?"

It is, indeed, a serious thing to decide.

"A queer twick to play on us. Wonder how they bwibed the conductor and porter?" ventures Larry, half to himself.

Doctor Jack sneers as he puts his hand in his pocket, takes out a handful of coins and jingles the change together.

"That music will accomplish wonderful things, my boy, astonishes things. Most men have their price. You have only to find out the size of their figure. Remember, I don't say all men, but there is more humbug about this world than appears on the surface. I must say I don't exactly fancy the looks of those who have charge of our car."

"My mind, Jack. The darky is ugly, and the conductor, well, I've seen better men in his line."

"Where could they hide?"

"You know there's a state-room at the other end of the car."

"Is the door shut?"

"Yes, and locked, for I twied to open it when I went that way, meaning to smoke there."

"That settles it. When you see the porter ask him to open it. That the lady would, perhaps, like to use it as a boudoir. We hire the car, and must be entitled to the whole of it."

"There he passes now. I'll twy."

Larry swoops out, with a cigarette between his teeth, and pounces upon the darky, who has left the entrance his little cubby hole, which might be dubbed both pantry and kitchen.

Presently he returns with a look of fierce import on his face. There is thunder on "that brow." Surely a storm hovers in the distance.

"It's settled at last!" he says.

"In what way?"

"Porter is very sorry—key to the state-room is lost, and he has no means of opening the door."

"The black rascal. It would serve him right, if we tossed him from the car."

At this Larry presses a hand on his abdomen.

"Pway don't Jack, dear boy. I admit he is a twaitor but think of the lunch he gave us. We have a good many hours to spend in this car—refwain I beg of you. If there is any tossing overboard, let it be those chaps in the state-room, the more unmitigated rascals who share the benefits of our special twain."

"Larry, you're right. Let the darky go. We must make sure of our game," and then by a plan to dislodge them."

So, while they sit and smoke they talk over many little schemes, all of which have for an object the confusion of the enemy.

Now and then one of them takes a glance into the car, to see that Avis is comfortable. He seems to be reading a novel and at peace, never dreaming that those who have given them so much trouble are in the same car as he himself, and, perhaps, even then watching her back of the drawn curtains screening the plate-glass window between the car and the state room.

When Jack later on communicates the startling intelligence to her, she is visibly disturbed. The presence of her husband's assassin so near her has ridden over all difficulties thus far, and they are half-way across the continent, so it is fair to presume that he will be able to keep up the good work. Her confidence in Jack is sublime, and he is compelled to put forth the best of his powers in order to merit such faith.

Larry was not born a detective, but he can show some energy in this line when circumstances compel him to adopt it.

Before a great while he joins Doctor Jack and his wife. What he has to tell convinces the doctor that their suspicions are correct.

Larry declares he got a whiff of tobacco smoke at an open window just back of the state-room, which proves the latter place to have gentlemen occupants.

Then, again, by placing his ear close to the partition separating it from the ladies' end of the car he believes he heard the murmur of voices, and even caught a Chilian oath, perhaps, uttered when Colonel Garcia discovered the abominable blunder he made in leaving his military hat behind him in the car. By the way, Larry has hung it just where he found it, so as to allay suspicions.

A while later he sees the porter take the hat, put it under his coat, and walk in the direction of the state-room, which fact proves conclusively that he has been in communication with the occupants.

Larry pokes his head a little way out of the window, and watches to see what happens.

He sees enough to prove it all true, for the porter, leaning out, thrusts the military hat in at another opening connected with the lunch station room.

There is no longer any doubt, and they can settle upon the course to be pursued.

Jack is indignant. He has hired this train at heavy expense, and no one to whom he objects has any right to ride on it.

So when he sees the conductor again, he follows him to the smoking compartment.

"A few words with you, my friend," he says.

The man in blue uniform looks uneasy, but takes a seat as Jack motions. Already has the latter analyzed his features—the confidence is not exactly what Larry pictured him, although Jack does not wholly fancy him.

You have handled that I charter this train—that my money pay for the services of every man connected with it?" says Jack.

"Certainly, sir," comes the ready reply.

"Ah! then tell me why you dare to carry other passengers—parties who are decidedly disagreeable to me—on this very car!"

CHAPTER XXXI.

It would be difficult, indeed, to do justice to the expression that marks Doctor Jack's face when he receives this demand. Men more valiant than the Pullman conductor have felt it before, and cringed, shrinking almost unconsciously from its wrath.

The man turns red in the face. He cannot look Jack in the eye for a minute.

"I am positive you have been deceived by those men. To set you right, my friend, I am going to tell you something of the history of this chase across the continent."

He does so, and as he proceeds the official's face shows a change—eagerness marks it now—he has become decidedly interested.

"And you are Doctor Jack. Well, I never expected to meet you. We all know about your adventures in Spain and Turkey. Yes, you are right, sir. I have been deceived. I could kick myself now for being such a dolt."

"Never mind. Tell me how it came about."

"As simple as apple pie. When the eastern express rolled in we waited for the party who had engaged the special. Up rome two gentlemen—"

"One dark and with a military look; the other plainly English!" interrupts Jack.

"Yes. This English fellow tells me a cock-and-bull story, and like a fool I believe it. He says he is a detective from Scotland Yard, in England, following his man around the world; that you have stolen a million and run away with a duchess. Before he knew them on board, since he said he would pay for the special in case you failed to turn up. Under these circumstances I trust you will pardon my mistake, Doctor Jack, and believe that I acted to the best of my judgment."

What can Jack do but forgive him.

"Then you will act with me, now?"

"The first thing to be done, then, is to get rid of these interlopers."

The conductor rises to his feet.

"Stay, and how would you do?"

"Stop at the next station, and force them to alight."

The doctor ponders a little.

He is disposed to be lenient, but the knowledge that these men are desperate in their endeavor to ruin him hardens his heart to a degree.

"Wait a while. We will reach some larger town or city at nightfall. That will be time enough to make them walk the plank."

It is a fatal decision, and one he has cause to regret later on, but we are mortal and unable to see into the future.

"That settles it. When you see the porter ask him to open it. That the lady would, perhaps, like to use it as a boudoir. We hire the car, and must be entitled to the whole of it."

"Then you will act with me, now?"

"The first thing to be done, then, is to get rid of these interlopers."

The conductor rises to his feet.

"Stay, and how would you do?"

"Stop at the next station, and force them to alight."

The doctor ponders a little.

He is disposed to be lenient, but the knowledge that these men are desperate in their endeavor to ruin him hardens his heart to a degree.

"Wait a while. We will reach some larger town or city at nightfall. That will be time enough to make them walk the plank."

It is a fatal decision, and one he has cause to regret later on, but we are mortal and unable to see into the future.

He decides to proceed to the next large town or city, and then—

"True," says Jack, frowning, "that only leaves an hour to cross the river and reach the office in Wall street; but that is doubly enough. We will take a vehicle at the Cortland street exit and have the Jehu hustle us along. I reckon we'll be entitled to pay, if only no wreck occurs on the road."

"I shall pray we may be delivered from that," declares Avis, solemnly.

This is spoken at the time they sight the dome of the capitol at Columbus. A short stop here, and again they go plunging toward the region of the rising sun.

Night approaches—the last night they expect to spend on the road. It has been a long and exciting ride from Valparaiso to New York, and rendered more than ordinarily dangerous on account of the desperate tactics adopted by their rivals. Perhaps the enemy will come at last, and be all the more pleasing because it has been earned.

It is on to Pittsburg now. The iron city ought to open before them by midnight, yes, even earlier, after which begins the climb over the great Alleghenies. Then they have traveled all over the world, and just crossed the grand Rockies on a special, can see nothing of a forbidding nature in such a task. It is a mere everyday performance.

Long before now Larry has discovered Lord Rackett and the doughty colonel in another car, with heads together. Probably they are planning desperate measures that may be used as a last resort, for their case is getting down to a fine point. New York fell as the end of this jump, and it is only a question of a few hours ere they reach that place.

Up the Alleghenies they pant with two engines behind them, increasing, passing through defiles, and at length reaching the summit. Then down the slope they rush with a whiz and a roar seventy miles an hour. An axle may now would annihilate them all. The train is warned, a red light flashes in the cold gray of early morning—there is a bad wreck ahead. Desperate measures are taken to stop the special. The air-brakes, usually so faithful, slip, and with a crash they are locked in the cars. Doctor Jack turns to shield his wife. The car seems to rise on end, totters, and then rolls down the embankment.

CHAPTER XXXII.

The scene that ensues beggars description. Fortunately this sleeper is the only car that leaves the road-bed, else the calamity would have been much greater. A wreck at night time—who can ever forget the scene—the fearful sounds, the blazing lights from burning freight cars, the his of escaping steam, and, above all, the agonizing cries of men and women half-crazed with fright or wounds.

Madness is apt to rule under such circumstances as these—even the coolest of men often join in the demoralization.

Doctor Jack can remember endeavoring to help his companion, Avis, who appears in the aisle just at the second they leave the track—he feels the car upheave like a horse rearing upon his hind legs—then it settles, and all turns over.

All is medley and confusion within. Fortunately the lights go out, so that darkness helps to prevent the horror. They seem to roll over once or twice, and then remain stationary, as though resting in a gully.

This accident had occurred; at one of a thousand other points they have passed in the heart of the Alleghenies, it would have resulted in a frightful loss of life; but like most other disasters that have happened at long intervals on this superb road, fortune has been kind, and apparently no one has met upon for the trouble.

Doctor Jack loses his mind. He is conscious of a fearful wrench and then comes a blank.

It is only a few minutes that he lies thus, and then his senses return. Strangely enough the car in landing had fallen upon its bed, so they stand upon the floor. Such a Bedlam as has broken out around them—every one appears to be shrieking at once. Confusion reigns, for the furniture of the car has been piled up in every conceivable manner.

A little light flitters through broken windows here and there. The burning freight cars serve one useful purpose, at least, for although dawn is close at hand it will be an hour at least before old Phœbus rears his glowing orb beyond the valley.

MARIQUITTA.

BY GEOFFREY MOOR.

Yes, it was the house at the corner, and I passed it every day; its inmates became familiar to me, and I became known to them. Father, mother, daughter and son, and they sat on the flat roof in the fresh evenings of the Indian cold weather; there, too, they lounged on sultry summer nights to catch a breath of air.

I did not know their name, but I knew that they were Eurasians; I did not even know to what community they belonged, but I knew that I was not likely ever to meet them in any society I might frequent.

I was not anxious to meet them or to develop any personal acquaintance with them, but they had become familiar objects to my vision, and formed to be part of my everyday life to see them sitting there on the roof.

One day I noticed a disturbance at the corner house. A vehicle of torture, otherwise known as an Indian cab—that is prone to rattle its unfortunate inmates to atoms long before its destination is reached—stood at the door. Two boxes and a bag seemed to compose the luggage of the new arrival; no board-ship chair, nothing to suggest a sea voyage, and so I clearly decided it was not the mail that brought this addition to the inhabitants of the corner house. The person, whoever it was, had crossed the black water, and only the luggage was waiting patiently outside. I had the curiosity to glance at the name and saw that they were marked "M. G."

My friends did not appear quite so often on the roof now, and they were never accompanied by a stranger.

It was the gay time of the year, and the festivities were numerous. I had a young friend staying with me at the time, and for his sake I determined to break through my lonely habits that I might show him some of the gayety of our town. There was a ball—but as the natives term our fancy dress dances, at the town hall, and for the sake of my friend I took tickets and we went. The evening, for the time of the year, was unusually warm, and all windows and doors were thrown widely open. The room looked crowded with decorations, and as my young companion seemed to enjoy himself I felt satisfied. Sauntering out on one of the verandas I sat down peacefully to smoke my cheroot and enjoy music that reached me in the balmy air. The veranda was so dark that I could not see the faces of two people who were sitting in the opposite corner. But I could not help overhearing a few words of their conversation.

"How do you like being here?"

I was almost startled to recognize the voice of my young friend.

"O, I like it very much; it is a great change," answered a girl's voice.

As they passed me I could see that her fancy dress was a copy of a Grecian robe, and that it was entirely white, and I heard my friend say: "I have not seen you for months."

I returned to the ballroom and watched the dancers. Then I became aware that my friend was approaching me, and that his Grecian partner was still with him. This time I saw her face; it was very beautiful—her complexion dark, but not sallow. Her face suited her fancy dress, for it was purely classical. Her eyes were large and dark, her hair was of a deep brown and loosely coiled at the back of the head in a Grecian knot. "Let me introduce you," he said, "to Miss Gonzalo." With a queasy little bow she turned to me, and we were soon engaged in conversation. My friend had left us, and, although I no longer dance, I had asked her to be my partner.

She had not been in town long, she said; she came from up country, where she had first met my companion.

Here my friend came up to claim her for a dance.

Later on in the evening I again found myself alone on the veranda. It was a clear sky above me, and my thoughts in an English home. My young friend came up to me. "They are playing the last dance," he said; "let us go home."

"By all means," I gladly rejoined. "Have you enjoyed your evening?"

"Pretty well. What do you think of Mariquitta Gonzalo?"

"She is very handsome and charming. Is she English?"

"Her father was a Spanish merchant and painter, and left her a very large fortune."

"You have known her some time, I hear?"

"Some months. I am glad you admire her. I really like the girl, and her fortune is worthy of old Indian times."

It was now my turn to flirt, and so you are going to make me the witness of an engagement, I suppose?" I said, with a smile.

"Not likely," he answered, with a laugh that somehow struck me unpleasantly.

Well, I only thought from what you said—"

"No, no; not for me," he rejoined; "they are all very well to talk to; perhaps, you know, I like to flirt myself, but not say so; but marry a woman with—well—dark blood in her ancestry—never!"

I heard a slight noise, and turning, saw Mariquitta Gonzalo in the doorway. The next minute she was gone.

"She heard," I faltered.

"Well, well, it cannot be helped," answered my companion, and turned to depart.

My friend left the next day; a constraint seemed to have fallen upon us.

* * * *

It was a cool, pleasant evening when I stopped my carriage at the corner house I knew so well. It was not the usual calling hour, but the one which I thought my friends were most likely to be found assembled.

It was some time before I discovered a man who looked as if he might belong to the place, as he sat reading, and, seemingly, by no means, inclined to understand me. When, at last, he appeared to have grasped the situation, he took my card and vanished into the house. Another man appeared, a very untidy man, whose dress, as well as his whole, looked somewhat ashamed of themselves. He led me up a bare staircase to a still barer landing-place and left me there into a sitting-room which certainly was not bare.

Some moments elapsed before "the mother" entered. I knew her well from my observations of the family as they sat on the roof. Over a loose white wrapper she had thrown a bright crimson shawl, which made one feel unconsciously warm, though, doubtless, it was meant as a reception costume. I had come to call. Thereupon the lady called: "Flora!"

Flora, appearing, bore a great resemblance to her mother, and was also attired in white, but her dress was tidier, and she proved decidedly pretty.

"Flora, this gentleman wants to see Mariquitta!"

"Yes, she is in," was the reply, and the damsel vanished.

"Miss Gonzalo is your niece?" I ventured.

"Oh, dear no! She is staying with us because we know her well up country before her mother died, and we wanted her to see the town and enjoy herself, so we have been taking her about."

"I was happy enough to meet her at the fancy dress ball the other evening."

"Ah, well! She did not enjoy that; she was ill afterwards; but Flora liked it."

Here we were interrupted by the appearance of that young lady and Mariquitta herself. The contrast between the two girls was very striking; nobody could have suspected Mariquitta of ancestors darker than Spaniards. She greeted me quietly, though, as she first recognized me, a deep flush had mounted to her cheek.

I wonder if that man is bringing tea?" asked the mother, apparently of nobody in particular.

I began to talk to Mariquitta, and was glad when mother and daughter vanished, for then she either evidently in quest of the untidy man and tea.

Then Mariquitta rose and walked to the open door that led to the flat roof I knew so well.

"It is hot here," she said.

We both stepped out and sat in low chairs on the roof.

"I am glad to have the opportunity of wishing you good-by," she said.

"Are you leaving us so soon?"

"Yes. I do not think I like town life, after all."

"Do you not find it lonely up country? You do not live by yourself?"

"An old friend of my mother lives with me. She and I have no time to be lonely, for I like to see to everything myself. Besides, I have always been to have been to Europe twice since my parents died. I went to Spain, but my father's relations are all dead."

"Miss Gonzalo," I said, rather abruptly, "your friends will return directly, and I have a message to deliver to you."

"Yes?" with a questioning glance.

"From my friend; he has left me; he was very sorry you—overheard. He was grieved to have hurt you."

I looked at her, but withdrew my glance, amazed, for the quiet girl beside me seemed of a sudden to be inspired with all the fire and dignity of her father's race.

"Grieved to have hurt me!" she repeated, slowly. "If I had believed his ardent words, if ever I could have believed him, he might have hurt me. But I knew that he could not mean such protestations for more than a few hours. I knew, for I had learned. Listen. I have had a good education, and my father was one of the noblest men I ever met. I knew long ago that I was rich, and thought I had advantages even above other girls. Ah! but I did not understand. My father never brought me to this town. I was educated in a convent at home. Then my parents died, and gradually I began to understand. I might have advantages, be educated and rich; but there would ever be one barrier that no man's hand could raise—the barrier of prejudice. And I do not blame them; but it is hard, sometimes, and I thought there might be exceptions."

She faltered, despite the proud curve of the lip, and I felt dimly what my friend had won and—lost.

"There are exceptions, Miss Gonzalo!" I exclaimed.

I gave her my hand; she pressed it lightly, but gently shook her head. Mother and daughter returned; the father and brother, too, appeared, for very dark, both very talkative. We conversed, we drank tea out of oddly assorted cups, and then the untidy man escorted me through the gaudy sitting-room and bare landing, down the dark staircase, out into the street, with its gayly-robed homeward-bound natives.

Before leaving I had turned to Mariquitta.

"Good-by," I said. "I hope we may meet again."

"Good-by," she had answered.

* * * *

I still pass the house at the corner, and look up at the roof, but I have never seen the family sitting there. The mother sometimes nods to me from the top, but they claim no other acquaintanceship.

I often remember Mariquitta and her strange fate, and think angrily of my friend, whom I have not seen since, and wonderingly of her words: "And I do not blame them." But when I recall the untidy man, the gaudy room, the white-robed mother, Flora, the ill-assorted cups, the objectionable father and brother—in fact, the whole establishment—I leave off wondering, and I, too, understand and do not blame. But, understanding with my head, there is a feeling which is still foolish enough to whisper:—

"Poor girl! poor Mariquitta!"—London Sketch.

Food of Fevers.

The vital functions and, more directly, the natural heat of the body are manifestations of energy, which is obtained by the slow combustion or oxidation of food and the tissues into which food becomes converted. During fever the assimilation of food is diminished, while the vital functions are accelerated and the production of heat increased. In these circumstances the extra energy required is supplied by the combustion of extra tissue, so that the substance of the body is rapidly consumed and progressive emaciation results. It is evident that, other things being equal, the individual who has the greatest amount of combustible material stored in his system at the time when he is attacked by fever will have the most prolonged resistance to its weakening effects; but such an individual, for the very reason that he is possessed of the store of material in question, provides a plentiful supply for the fever to feed upon, and, in consequence, the latter "runs high."

How to Repaper a Shirt.

Young men who wear shirt fronts that are too loud to pass through a laundry safely will find interest in a paragraph printed in a recent issue of the college paper of the Notre Dame University, the Scholastic. It appeared as an answer to a question submitted by a student who had the misfortune to burn a hole in a long ways toward settling the vexing problem. Here it is:—

Doc. B.—Soak the shirt bosom in warm water and the wall paper may be removed with ease. In repapering the bosom use glue.

Why He Wouldn't Forget.

"Can I trust you to mail this?" asked Miss Jawkins of the new boarder, "or are you the kind of man who carries letters around in his pocket for a week before mailing them?"

"You may trust me," said the new boarder, taking the letter. "I was cured of that disease at my first attack. I was boarding in the same house with a very good friend, a married man. He lost his wife suddenly and was inconsolable. Loads of letters came to him from sympathetic friends, and one of them was handed to me to give to him by the postman. I carried it up stairs to my room and inadvertently put it into my desk with a lot of rubbish from my breast pocket, and then forgot all about it.

"Just a year after my friend had so far forgotten his loss that he became engaged to a very pretty girl. The morning of the wedding, to which I had been invited, I was putting my desk in order—a habit I have about once in six years—and I came across the letter. I threw it in. Forgetting the time at which it had come, I hurried down stairs with it, and, with many words of apology, handed it to him. He had a habit of reading out loud, and he began: 'My Dear Jack—You have received a blow in the loss of your wife from which you will hardly recover, but don't forget, my dear fellow, that—' Then he dropped it and glared at me.

"I didn't go to the wedding, and he's never spoken to me from that day to this. Yes, indeed, you may trust me to mail your letter without fail."—New York Journal.

Compressed Air as Motive Power.

The attention of inventors has been so concentrated on electricity and its possibilities that compressed air, which is almost as wonderful in its capabilities, has been quite lost sight of. Just what it is capable of we cannot as yet understand, but we do know that it runs locomotives, transmits the United States mails, hurls the charge of an explosive a mile and a half, with a force sufficient to pulverize a regiment. It operates block signals on railroads, loads guns, drives machinery, works pumps and carves out all sorts of beautiful things from stone and marble. It is coming into use for thousands of minor purposes.

As a cleaning and dusting agent it is invaluable. It copies letters, shears sheep and is utilized in the slaughter of cattle, also in the dressing of meat. As to its future, prediction is made that it will clean house, run dumb waiters, take the place of the fire in the kitchen stove, locomotives will wash dishes and rock the baby. There are inventors who declare that compressed air is already quite as useful as electricity, and much safer and more manageable. To bring it into its best uses large distributing stations must be built, from which compressed air will come as we now get gas and water. There will, no doubt, be a sharp rivalry between the two great powers, electricity and compressed air, but between the two we ought to be able to get most of our minor services well and cheaply performed.—New York Ledger.

DOES MUNYON CURE?

That Seems Like a Very Untimely and Absurd Question. After

ALL THE TESTIMONY

All the Tests and the Thousands of Absolute and Unquestioned Cures That Have Been Made by Munyon in Canada.

Mr. W. S. Nelson, engineer, Evening News, Toronto, Canada, says: "I was troubled with the most severe form of catarrh for eight years. Had tried everything to get well, but without success. The pains were almost forbidding. I was never at night that I was unable to obtain my needed rest. I was also subject to sneezing to such an extent that I would often sneeze as often as forty to fifty times a day. At the General Hospital, where I went for treatment I was told that an operation was necessary in order to burn it out the only hope. I have used Munyon's Cold and Catarrh Cure for one month and became rapidly better. I believe Munyon has done more for me than all the others and I have sent hundreds of people to Munyon."

Munyon's Rheumatic Cure seldom fails to relieve in less than three hours and cures in a few days. Price 25c.

An Ontario Lady Had Her Hands Poisoned

Ladies should remember that the Diamond Dyes are the only pure, true and unadulterated dyes in the world. The imitation dyes sold under various names have bulk enough, but three-fourths of the contents is composed of cheap and worthless ingredients most dangerous to use and handle.

Diamond Dyes, prepared according to scientific principles, are always the same in color and strength; these great advantages the women of Canada fully appreciate.

An Ontario lady writing about Diamond Dyes says:

"Your Diamond Dyes are the best I have ever used; they are quite harmless to work with and never irritate the skin. I had occasion to use a package of common, cheap dye that was sold me as being equal to the 'Diamond,' but it proved a source of great trouble. After using it a severe rash appeared on my hands, showing it contained poisonous matter."

Sudden Death.

Goderich, Ont., July 4.—Mr. Joseph Williams, a retired lumber merchant and vessel owner, died suddenly this morning at one o'clock, after an hour's illness, aged 66. Mr. Williams was a staunch Liberal, and was one of the most enterprising business men and councillors. The funeral will take place from here on Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Charles Allen, a farmer about 65 years old, who lived near the north of Elliot Corners, was killed by the falling of a barn, in which he and others had taken shelter during a storm.

Mr. and Mrs. Robeson, of West Port, were the guests of Mr. Gordon Valleau last week.

WILTON

On Sunday a great crowd was attracted to our quiet village to witness the baptizing of six members of the Free Methodist church. The creek below the church was the place where the service took place, and Rev. Sims performed the ceremony. Between eight and nine hundred people stood on the bank, and the street up as far as the Methodist church was lined with rigs.

On Saturday evening the sad intelligence reached the village of the sudden death of Mr. Norman Storms, of Violet. Deceased was a man who was always ready to lend a hand in the work for the Lord. Always at his post, he was for years a leader of the choir, and also class leader in the Methodist church, which office he has been a member. Though it was but noon tide yet, he was ready for the call of the bridegroom. The service took place on Monday at Violet church and friends from far and wide attended. Rev. W. Coombe conducted the services, assisted by Revs. D. Fleming and S. Crookshanks, a former pastor of this church. Much sympathy is extended the family by all.

Servant of God, well done!
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is run,
And thou art crowned at last.

In condescending love
Thy ceaseless prayer He heard,
And bade thee suddenly remove
To thy complete reward.

Released from earth and pain,
Oh! when shall we ascend,
And all in Jesus' presence reign
With our translated friend?

Killed by a Train.

Wm. Hose, a young man about 22 years of age, son of Mr. Charles Hose, Desoronto, was killed in the G. T. R. yards, Belleville, on Wednesday. The unfortunate young man, with two companions, boarded a freight train going east and, as the conductor ordered them off, Hose jumped off in front of the afternoon express for the west, which then came along. The express engine struck him and knocked him under the freight, which passed over him, completely severing his body. The trains were stopped and willing hands speedily went to the injured man's aid, but he appeared to have been instantly killed.

OBITUARY.

ALICE J. DRYDEN,

wife of Mr. S. R. Miller, and daughter of the late Wm. Dryden, passed peacefully and quietly to her reward on Saturday morning last, about 8 o'clock. The immediate cause of death was pernicious anæmia. Deceased was born in Napanee, in 1850, and was consequently in her 47th year at her death. She was married in 1870, and all her days were passed in the place of her birth. Early in life Mrs. Miller professed christianity, and at once became connected with the Wesleyan Methodist church, of which body she had been an earnest worker and devoted member up to the end. She was first taken ill a year ago last March, and while suffering much weakness and mental worry, all was borne with a resignation that brought out the beauty of her christian character, and full assurance of a glorious reward. Deceased was beloved by a large circle of relatives and acquaintances, but it was only in the home life and the inner circle of friends, that her devotion and many womanly virtues were most appreciated and understood, and her loss will be most keenly felt. Besides the sorrowing husband, two sons, Edward D., attorney, New York, Charlie, at home, and two daughters, Minnie M., and Gertie M., also at home, are left to mourn the loving and tender care of a devoted mother. The funeral on Sunday afternoon was very largely attended, the A.O.U.W., of which body Mr. Miller is M.W., attending in a body. The sorrowing family have the sincere sympathy of a very large circle of friends in their sad affliction.

NORMAN STORMS, ESQ.

Mr. Norman Storms, a well-known and much respected resident of Ernestown, died very suddenly at his residence a couple of miles east of Violet on Saturday evening last. He was a man of sterling worth and held in the highest esteem by all who knew him. He was born on the farm where he lived and died, lot 23, 6th concession of Ernestown, on the 16th of October, 1836, and was consequently in the sixty-first year of his age. He was of U. E. Loyalist stock, his grandfather, one of the pioneers of the township, having settled on the same homestead at the early settlement of that locality. Here his grandfather, his father and himself all lived and died—all of them being men of intelligence, integrity and uprightness. In politics, Mr. Storms was a sterling Reformer. He was an active temperance worker, and for many years a very prominent and consistent member of the Methodist church, in which he held several important official relations—class leader, choir leader, and Sunday School teacher. The church and Violet, and indeed the whole community, suffer a very serious loss indeed in his death. The burial took place in the Violet cemetery on Monday last and was very largely attended. Few men had more sincere friends—for he was a friend to all—and few have had so few enemies, for he was the enemy of none. As a neighbor, a friend, a citizen, a husband and a father, he filled well and conscientously all his duties in life. He was a good man in the verdict of all who knew him. Mr. Miles Storms, of Moscow, and Alison Storms, P.C., of Odessa, are his brothers. He married Miss Eliza Daly, daughter of the late David Daly, near Bath, who survives him, with three adult daughters, one of whom is Mrs. Wm. Sharp.

CARRIE MARIA M'CAY.

On Sunday morning last, at three o'clock, Carrie M. McCay, daughter of Mrs. Wm. McCay, and granddaughter of Mr. James Fellows and Mrs. Robt. McCay, Napanee, departed from this world of sorrow and trouble. Deceased was a bright and lovable girl, a general favorite among her acquaintances, and especially with her schoolmates. That dreadful enemy of man, consumption, resulting from a cold, was the cause of death. All that loving care and medical skill could do was of no avail—the spark of life grew weaker each day till she passed into that sleep that knows no waking till the resurrection. She was in her fourteenth year. The funeral occurred on Monday to the Napanee cemetery. The sympathy of the whole community goes out to the bereaved mother and brother in their sad bereavement.

MRS. SMITH,

relict of the late Mathias Smith, died at her son's home in Richmond on Friday last at the advanced age of 83 years. Deceased was one of the early pioneers of this district, and was very much respected by a very large circle of acquaintances. Two years ago last October Mrs. Smith broke her thigh, from which injury she never fully recovered. In March last she suffered a stroke of paralysis, and gradually sank until on Friday she quietly and peacefully ceased to be on earth, and commenced a new life in the better land. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Father Wilson.

RODERICK PARROTT,

died at the residence of Mr. Wm. Woof, Belleville, on the evening of Wednesday, 30th June, aged 66 years. Deceased was born in Ernestown, and lived in that township for nearly thirty years. About 1857 he removed to Belleville, and for a long time carried on the grocery business near the Grand Trunk station. Deceased was well-known and respected in Belleville and Napanee, representing Bleeker Lodge in the City Council in 1890. Mr. Parrott had been in poor health for several years. He was twice married, but no children blessed the home. Funeral took place on Friday morning, the remains being taken to his old home in Ernestown for interment. Deceased was a brother of Mr. J. M. Parrott, and Mrs. E. Bicknell, Napanee, and Mrs. Isaac F. Asselstine, Ernestown.

A Terrible Tragedy.

REGINA, N.W.T., July 5.—A terrible tragedy occurred near here on Saturday. A well was being dug on the farm of Robert Moore, 20 miles from Regina, on the road to Wascona. Nothing had been done for a week and the well had been covered over. On Saturday Moore started to resume operations and was being lowered into the pit by Charles Wilson Beattie, of Palmerston, Ont., when the latter felt the rope slacken, and heard Moore fall. He ran for Andrew Moore, a cousin of the other, who proceeded to lower Beattie into the well. Beattie was but thirty feet down, Moore heard a croaking noise from Beatie, and then felt his hold of the rope was gone. He called to get no answer.

He then went for James Carroll, who was ploughing close by, and asked him to lower him into the well. Carroll said he would go down himself. Moore thereupon lowered him down. At twenty feet Carroll called out: "Pull me out, I am dying." Moore pulled him up, but when twelve feet from the top Carroll let go his hold and fell. Andrew Moore then went for help, and got James Jones, Sandy Howe, and William J. Moore, two her of Robert. Sandy Howe was preparing to descend, but it was decided to send down a lantern. It went out at twelve feet. A hook was then got, and the bodies were grappled for, and brought to the surface. All the men were quite dead.

An inquest was held and a verdict of death returned. Andrew Moore was exhonerated from blame. Carroll is said to have left a wife and family in Toronto.

—Wm. J. Rogers was sentenced to two months in jail for forging the name of Jas. St. Charles, Belleville, on a promissory note.

MAKING LAWNS.

Directions For Grading—Outlining Walks, Beds and Borders—Grass Seed.

One of the first requisite in making a lawn is that the surface be even, to admit of the grass being regularly cut by a lawn mower. Aside from the evenness of the surface, attention ought to be given to the general appearance of the grade. In the illustration here reproduced from American Gardening are shown four views of the same section of a lawn and illustrating the effect of various lawn contours. The upper grade strikes the eye as being unnatural, because of the ill shaped finish bestowed on it in construction. It is, moreover, so uneven that it cannot well be kept in good order.

FOUR GRADES IN LAWN MAKING.

The second section shows the same lawn nicely graded, as with a level. It affords no variety in its contour, as natural landscapes do, with rare exceptions. The third grade is slightly dishing, which of all forms for small grass areas is the worst. It is comparatively characterless, having indeed a depressing effect on the beholder. In pleasing contrast with this is the style at the bottom, which shows a swelling contour through its centre, which at once satisfies the eye of good taste. It is a style that may well serve as a pattern for the average small "dooryard" lawn.

The illustrations refer to land that is level or nearly so, hence might not apply to grounds that possess natural undulations. In the latter case it is advised that slight unevennesses be reduced, in order to facilitate the use of the mower, especially near the house, but in the main there might be no objection to retaining some natural variations of the surface.

A rule that must be adopted in lawn grading is to have a good depth of fertile surface soil over all parts as finished. This may vary from 4 to 8 inches in thickness, according as the lawn is with or without access to hydrant water. If all work up to this stage and also the final plowing, smoothing, raking and rolling, could be done in the fall and the final touches be left until spring, thus securing thorough settling of the soil, the lawn will not lose its shape. In the absence of either over winter settling or of a heavy intervening rain, if the surface is everywhere thoroughly tramped by horses when the soil is so dry that it will not pack, this may answer nearly as well as the other ways. A perfect tool for smoothing is a "float," consisting of two pieces of scantling about 6 feet long, on which are nailed inch boards a foot apart, connecting one scantling with the other 3 feet apart. To add effectiveness the driver stands on it when passing rough places.

Next mark out the walks and drives and the edging of the beds and borders, preparatory to defining all such edges with a line of sods. In the illustration A shows a walk, B B B, a bed and the borders of a lawn ready for seeding, all the edges being this defined. The operation is a simple one: First, some sod is cut and rolled; second, a slight depression about half as deep as the sod is thick is made in the soil, and here the sod is put in place and thoroughly beaten with the back of a spade to settle the grass roots firmly.

Feeding Corn Fodder.

Tests of methods of preparing and feeding corn fodder, conducted under the auspices of the Maryland station, gave results which warrant the following conclusions:

By wetting and mixing the shredded corn fodder with the grain ration there is more complete consumption of the fodder—there being but half as much waste matter—than when the fodder and grain are fed dry and separate. The method of mixing produced more milk and kept the animals in better flesh.

The wetting of the fodder when fed alone, and also when fed with grain, made it more digestible. The method of feeding the ration as a mixed feed gave a larger percentage of digestible matter than any of the methods tested. From these facts it is safe to say that the method of making a mixed feed of a ration is the best method to adopt in order to have that most complete consumption and the best returns for the food consumed.

SAFETY FOR CITIES.

REV. DR. TALMAGE PREACHES ON MUNICIPAL WELFARE.

He Discusses the Cities and Towns of This Country From a Moral and Religious Standpoint—Counsel to Those Who Hold Public Positions.

Washington, July 4.—This sermon of Dr. Talmage discusses from a moral and religious standpoint the welfare of all the towns and cities of our country. His text is Ezekiel xxvii. 3, "O thou that art, situate at the entry of the sea!"

This is a part of an impassioned apostrophe to the city of Tyre. It was a beautiful city—a majestic city. At the east end of the Mediterranean it sat with one hand beckoning the inland trade and with the other the commerce of foreign nations. It swung a boundless chain across its harbor to shut out foreign enemies and then swung back that boom to let in its friends. The air of the desert was fragrant with the spices brought by caravans to her fairs, and all seas were girdled into foam by the keels of her laden merchantmen. Her markets were rich with horses and mules and camels from Togarmah; with upholstery and ebony and ivory from Dedan; with emeralds and agate and coral from Syria; with wine from Helbon; with finest needlework from Ashur and Chilmad. Talk about the splendid staterooms of your Cunard and Inman and White Star lines of international steamers—why, the benches of those stately Tyrian ships were all ivory, and instead of our coarse canvas on the mast of the shipping, fine linen of the finest linen, quilted together and inwrought with embroideries almost miraculous for beauty. Its columns overshadowed all nations. Distant empires felt its heartbeat. Majestic city, "situate at the entry of the sea."

But where now is the gleam of her towers, the roar of her chariots, the masts of her shipping? Let the fishermen who dry their nets on the place where she once stood, let the sea that rushes upon the barrenness where she once challenged the admiration of all nations let the barbarians who build their huts on the place where her palaces glittered, answer the question. Blotted out forever! She forgot God, and God forgot her. And while our modern cities admire her grandeur let them take warning at her awful doom.

The First City.

Cain was the founder of the first city, and I suppose it took after him in morals. It is a long while before a city can get over the character of those who founded it. Were they criminal exiles, the filth, and the prisons, and the debauchery are the shadows of such founders. New York will not for 200 or 300 years escape from the good influences of its founders, the pious settlers whose prayers went up from the log meeting houses where now banks discount, and brokers shave, and companies declare dividends, and smugglers swear custom house lies, and above the roar of the drays and the crack of the auctioneers' mallets is heard the ascription, "We worship thee, O thou almighty Dollar!" The chimes of Trinity stood on Wall street still throws its blessing over all the scene of traffic and upon the ships that fold their white wings in the harbor. Originally pure Christianity rites from necessity. It was to escape the incendiary's torch or the assassin's dagger. Only the very best of nations in the country, those who had nothing that could be stolen or vagabonds who wanted to be near their place of business, but since civilization and religion have made it safe for men to live almost anywhere men congregate in cities because of the opportunity for rapid gain. Cities are not necessarily evil, as sometimes has been argued. They have been the birthplace of civilization. In them popular liberty has lifted up its voice. Witness Genoa and Pisa and Venice. Witness the fact that the representatives of the cities in the legislatures of Europe was the deathblow to feudal kingdom. Cities are the patentees of art and literature and architecture pointing to its British museum in London its Royal library in Paris, its Vatican in Rome. Cities hold the world's scepter. Africa was Carthage, Greece was Athens, England is London, France is Paris, Italy is Rome and the cities in which God has set his foot are to be beside the destiny of the American people.

At this season of the year I have thought it might be useful to talk a little while about the moral responsibility resting upon the office bearers in all our cities, a theme as appropriate to those who are governed as to the governors. The moral character of those who rule a city has much to do with the character of the city itself. Men, women and children are all interested in good municipal politics. When the great presidential election comes, every patriot wants to be found at the ballot box. We are all interested in the discussion of national finance, national debt, and we read the laws of congress, and we are wondering who will sit next in the presidential chair. Now, all that is well and well—is very well. But it is high time that we took some of the attention which we have been giving to national affairs and brought it to the study of municipal government. This it seems to me now is the chief point to be taken. Make the city government pure by first-rate principles. I have noticed that according to their opportunities, there has really been more corruption in municipal governments in many instances than in the state or national legislatures. Now, is there no hope? With the mightiest agent in our hand, the glorious gospel of Jesus Christ, shall not all our cities be reformed and purified and redeemed? I believe the day will come. I am in full sympathy with those who are opposed to connecting politics into religion, but our cities will never be reformed and purified until we carry religion into politics. I look over our cities and I see that all the evil effects are to be affected in the future, as they have been affected in the past, by the character of those who in the different departments rule over us, and I propose to classify some of those interests.

Commercial Ethics.

In the first place, I remark commercial ethics are always affected by the moral character of those who have municipal supremacy. Officials that wink at fraud and that have neither conscience nor shame for inflicting dishonesties always weaken the pulse of commercial honor. Every shop, every store, every bazaar, every factory in the cities feels the moral character of the city hall. If in any city there be a dishonest mayoralty, or an unprincipled common council, or a court susceptible to bribes, in that city there will be unlimited license for all kinds of trickery and sin, while, on the other hand, if officials are faithful to their oaths of office, if the laws are promptly executed, if there is vigilance in regard to the open branchings of crime, there is the highest protection for all bargain making.

A merchant may stand in his store and say: "Now, I'll have nothing to do with city politics. I will not soil my hands with the slush." Nevertheless the most insignificant trial in the police court will affect that merchant directly or indirectly. What style of clerk issues the writ? What style of constable makes the arrest? What style of attorney issues the plea? What style of judge charges the jury? What style of sheriff executes the sentence? These are questions that strike your counting rooms to the center. You may not throw it off. In the city of New York Christian merchants for a great while said: "We'll have nothing to do with the management of public affairs." and they allowed everything to go at loose ends until there rolled up in that city a debt of more than $120,000,000. The municipal government became a hissing and a byword in the whole earth, and then the Christian merchants saw their folly, and they went and took possession of the ballot boxes. I wish all commercial men to understand that they are not to stand up, by the moral character of the men who rule over them, but must be thoroughly, mightily affected by them.

So also of the educational interests of a city. Do you know that there are in this country about 70,000 common schools, and that there are over 5,000,000 pupils, and that the majority of those schools and the majority of those pupils are in our cities? Now, this great multitude of children will be affected by the intelligence or ignorance, the virtue or the vice of boards of education and boards of control. There are cities where educational affairs are settled in the low caucus in the abandoned parts of the city by men full of ignorance and rum. It ought not to be so, but in many cities it is so. I hear the tramp of coming generations. What that great multitude of youth shall be for this world and the next will be affected very much by the character of your public schools. You had better multiply the moral and religious influences about the common schools rather than subtract from them. Instead of driving the Bible out, you had better drive the Bible further in. May God defend our glorious common school system and send into rout and confusion all its sworn enemies.

City Officials.

I have also to say that the character of officials in a city affects the domestic circle. In a city where grogshops have their own way and gambling hells are not interfered with, and for fear of losing poll load influence officials close their eyes to festering abominations—in all those cities the home interests need to make implorations. The family circles of the city must inevitably be affected by the moral character or the immoral character of those who rule over them.

I will go further and say that the religious interests of a city are thus affected. The church to-day has to contend with evils that the civil law ought to annihilate, and which it would not have the civil government in any wise relax its energy in the arrest and punishment of crime. I would have a thousandfold more energy put forth in the drying up of the fountains of iniquity. The church of God asks no pecuniary aid from political power but does ask that in addition to all the evils we must necessarily contend against we shall not have to fight also municipal negligence. Oh, that in all our cities Christian people would rise up, and that they would put their hand on the helm before piratical demagogues have swamped the ship! Instead of giving so much time to national politics, give some of your attention to municipal governmeat.

I demand that the Christian people who have been standing aloof from public affairs come back, and in the might of God try to save our cities. If things are or have been bad, it is because good people have let them be bad. That Christian man who merely goes to the polls and casts his vote does not do his duty. It is not the ballot box that decides the election; it is the political caucus, and if at the primary meetings of the two political parties men of bad and of mean principles and of selfish end are nominated, then the ballot box has nothing to do save to take its choice between two thieves. In our churches, by reformatory organization, in every way let us try to tone up the moral sentiment in these cities. The rulers are those whom the people choose, and depend upon it that in all the cities as long as pure hearted men stand aloof from politics because they despise hot partisanship, just so long in many of our cities will rum make the nominations, and rum control the ballot box, and rum inaugurate the officials.

I take a step further in this subject and ask all those who believe in the omnipotence of prayer, day by day and every day, present your city officials before God for a blessing. If you live in a city presided over by a mayor, pray for him. The chief magistrate of a city is in many cases a responsible. Many of the kings and queens and emperors of other days had no such opinion. With the scratch of a pen he may advance a prosperous enterprise or bulk a railway confiscation. By appointments he may bless or curse every hearthstone in the city. If in the Episcopal churches, by the authority of the litany, and in our non-episcopate churches we every Sabbath pray for the president of the United States, why not, then, be just as hearty in our supplications for the chief magistrates of cities, for their guidance, for their health, for their present and their everlasting morality?

The Common Council.

But go further, and pray for your common council, if your city has a common council. They hold in their hands a power splendid for good or terrible for evil. They have many temptations. In many of the cities whole boards of common council men have gone down in the quagmire of political corruption. They could not stand the power of the bribe. Corruption came in and set beside them, and sat behind them, and sat before them. They recklessly voted away the hard earned moneys of the people. They were bought out, body, mind and soul, so that at the end of their term of office they had not enough of moral remains left to make a decent funeral. They went into office with the hands of the multitude. They came out with the anathema of all decent people. There is not one man out of a hundred that can endure the temptations of the common council men in our great cities. If a man in that position have the courage of a Cromwell, and the independence of an Andrew Jackson, and the public spiritedness of a John Frederick Oberlin, and the piety of an Edward Payson, he will have no surplus to throw away. Pray for these men. Every man likes to be prayed for. Do you know how Dr. Norman McLeod became the Queen's chaplain? It was by a warm and hearty prayer in the Scotch kirk, in behalf of the royal family, one Sabbath when the queen and her son were present incognito.

The Police.

Yes, go further, my friends, and pray for your police. Their perils and temptations are best known to themselves. They hold the ordeal and peace of your cities in their grasp. But for their intervention you would not be safe for an hour. They must face the storm. They must rush in where it seems to them almost instant death. They must put the hand of arrest on the armed maniac and corner the murderer. They must refuse large rewards for withdrawing complaints. They must unravel intricate plots and trace dark labyrinths of crime and develop surprises into certainties. They must be cool while others are frantic. They must be vigilant while others are somnolent, impersonating the very villainy they want to seize. In the police forces of our great cities are to-day men of as thorough character as that of the old detective of New York, addressed to whom there came letters from London asking for help ten years after he was dead—letters addressed to "Jacob Hays, High Constable of New York." Your police need your appreciation, your sympathy, your gratitude and, above all, your prayers. Yea, I want a prayer for the other and pray every day for prison inspectors and jailkeepers, work awful and beneficent. Rough men, crude men, impatient men, are not fit for those places. They have under their care men who were once as good as you, but they got tripped up. Bad company or consuming drink or strange conjunction of circumstances flung them headlong. Go down that prison corridor and ask them how they got in and about their families, and what their early prospects in life were, and you will find that they are very much like yourself, except in this, that God kept you while he did not restrain them. Just one false step made the difference between them and you. They want more than prison bars, more than jail fare, more than handcuffs and hoppliers, more than a vermin covered couch to reform them. Pray for all to-day day that the men who have these unfortunates in charge may be merciful, Christianly stragetic and the means of reformation and rescue.

Some years ago a city pastor in New York was called to the city prison to attend a funeral. A young woman had committed a crime and was imprisoned and her mother came to visit her, and died on the visit. The mother, having been buried, the daughter was returned to prison cell. After the service was over the imprisoned daughter came up to the minister of Christ and said, "Wouldn't you like to say a word to mother?" And while they stood at the coffin the minister of Christ said to that imprisoned soil, "Don't you feel to-day, in the presence of your mother's dead body, as you ought to make a vow before God that you will do differently and live a better life?" And in a few moments, under the tears rolled down her cheeks, and she pulled from her right hand the wormout glove that she had put on in honor of the obsequies, and, with her bared her right hand, she put it upon the chill brow of her dead mother and said: "By the help of God, I swear I will do differently! God help me!" And she kept her vow. And years after, when she was told of the incident, she said: "When that minister of the gospel said, 'God bless you and help you to keep the vow that you have made,' I cried out, and I said: 'You bless me! Do you bless me? Why, that's the first time that I've heard in ten years.' And it thrilled through my soul, and it was the means of my reformation, and ever since, by the grace of God, I've tried to lead a Christian life." Oh, yes, there are many amid the criminal classes that may be reformed, and to Judge McLean of Ohio, and to Benjamin F. Butler, attorney general of New York, and to George Briggs, governor of Massachusetts, and to the late Senator Conkling, senator of the United States, and to William Wilberforce, member of the British parliament, I pray make the rewards of eternity the emoluments of your office. What care you for adverse political criticism if you love God on your side? Your work is for one, or for the welfare of your public trust will pass away, and all the years of your earthly service, and then the tribunal will be lifted before God for a decision. If you live in a city presided over by a mayor, pray for him. The chief magistrate of a city is in many cases a responsible. Many of the kings and queens and emperors of other days had no such opinion. With the scratch of a pen he may advance a prosperous enterprise or bulk a railway confiscation. SAVED HER DRUNKEN HUSBAND

She Finally Administered a Remedy Without his Knowledge, and Cured Him.

A correspondent writes: I had such a happy home and a noble, big-hearted husband till he took to drinking, first through sociability, then because the fiendish desire would come over him, crazing him for drink.

I was heart-broken. My happy home was fast becoming one of misery till a friend told me to try a liquor cure called Anti-Booze. I was willing to try anything, so I sent $1.00 as she suggested, to the Oriental Chemical Co., 20 St Alexis St., Montreal, and by return mail I received in a plain wrapper a little box of pills. I put one of these in his coffee every night and morning without him knowing it, as they dissolve immediately, and in less than a week, to my delight, he stopped drinking entirely.

"Anti-Booze has changed my drunken husband into a sober, industrious, happy man, and I feel it my duty to tell others about it. They will send full information without charge to any who will write them. "J. D. H." 18cm

BLOW MAY BE FATAL

RESULT OF A DRUNKEN QUARREL AT VERONA.

Reuben Jackson Struck by Matthew Revell—Now Lies Unconscious—His Assailant Arrested at Napanee.

Kingston, July 5.—At Verona yesterday Reuben Jackson, proprietor of the Jackson House in that village, and Matthew Revell, went out for a drive in Jackson's buggy. Last evening Revell drove up to the surgery of Dr. E. B. Moles and stated to the doctor that he and Jackson had had a difficulty, and that he had struck the latter, who, he thought, was going to die. He carried Jackson, who was insensible, into the doctor's office. He was bleeding from three cuts on the face. Early this morning he recovered consciousness, and in answer to a question said he was not suffering from the cuts on his face, but from a pain in the back of his neck. An examination failed to discover any bruise or cut there, and it is supposed that when Jackson fell the back of his neck struck against a stone or other hard substance. He fell asleep soon after having been revived, and continued to sleep for several hours. The story told by Revell to Dr. Moles and Train Despatcher Cook of Verona was to the effect that Jackson became very quarrelsome after driving for some time and wanted to fight. Revell refused, and Jackson upset the buggy in attempting to turn about. Both men were thrown out, and Jackson followed Revell around the rig several times threatening to whip him. Revell warned him repeatedly to desist or he would strike him, and his warning not being heeded he finally did strike his companion, with the result above described. In Dr. Moles' office Revell appeared very remorseful for what he had done. Both are men of over the medium size, but Jackson is consumptive, while Revell is robust and healthy. They were both drunk yesterday, Jackson apparently being worse than Revell. The latter has a brother living in this city employed as engineer in Campbell's flour mill, foot of Brock street. Jackson's mother resides at Enterprise, and a brother is a resident of Deseronto. They have been sent for. At 4 o'clock this afternoon Jackson was thought to be dying, but he revived somewhat and remains in a partly unconscious condition. He is not expected to survive.

Holy Days.

It has been well said that the poet Tennyson was always unable to give expression to the passion of joy. Perhaps this was largely owing to the fact that he was the poet of the time and the poet of his country. Joy does not enter very largely into the life of the modern world. People nowadays are anxious, curious and restless. They plan for the future, they search for knowledge and they labor incessantly. The only remedy for this tension is a little more self-distrust and a little more trust in God. The habit of waiting upon Divine Providence is a remarkably restful habit. "Casting all your care upon Him" is a great saving of nerve power, of spiritual and intellectual energy; it is likely to give more room for an unfettered play in the instincts of simple enjoyment, such as are seen in children. An act of thanksgiving to God is an attributing to Him of all the blessings we enjoy. The great national festival of Thanksgiving looks back with gratitude to the past, with hope and confidence to the future. "The joy of harvest" becomes real only when it is founded upon a recollection of the bounty, the unchangeableness and the omnipotence of God. Life can have no real holiday unless it be also a holy day. True joy springs from religious dependence upon God. "Rejoice in the Lord always, and again I say unto you, Rejoice." There can be no better corrective to the feverish haste and are of modern life than the pure observance of the day on which thanks and praise are given to God for His past mercies. The thought of His providence and of His gifts should be a quiet and undistractedness for the experience of that joy which should be a part of life here, as it is revealed in Scripture as part of the better life in heaven.

Killed by Lightning.

Arthur, July 5.—Mr. Clark, farmer, near Fergus, was killed here to-day during the afternoon storm, being struck by lightning in the shed of the Royal Hotel, the bolt striking the barn and shattering the roof.

Sent Down for Three Years.

Toronto, July 6.—When John Gray Gibson appeared in the Police Court yesterday, charged with larceny from the O'Keefe Brewing and Malting Company, of which he was secretary-treasurer, his counsel, R. S. Neville, withdrew Gray's plea and election. Prior to the last remand the prisoner wanted to be tried by jury, and pleaded not guilty. Yesterday Mr. Neville stated that Gibson was anxious to be tried by his Worship Mr. Kingsford, and after hearing the evidence for the prosecution of Mr. Neville and Crown Attorney Curry, Mr. Kingsford imposed a sentence on Gibson for the theft of $25 from the O'Keefe Company on the 9th of July, 1895, of three years in Kingston penitentiary. On two other counts sentences of two years in the same institution were imposed upon him, all three sentences to run concurrently.

Rabies in Dundas.

Dundas, July 3.—This town, in common with several western Ontario towns, has a hydrophobia scare. About six weeks ago a young lad named McKenzie was bitten by a dog belonging to his father and died shortly afterward. A post-mortem was held by the order of the Provincial Board of Health and the medulla sent to Mr. McKenzie, Toronto, the head of the bacteriological department, for examination. The other day the Provincial authorities sent Dr. Smith their finding in the case, stating it to be one of rabies. James McKenzie, an elder brother of the deceased, who was also bitten, has gone to New York to receive special treatment.

Conspiracy Charges Dismissed.

Goderich, July 3.—The Jessop and Mellroy charge of conspiracy was dismissed to-day, and Mrs. Jessop was rearrested, charged with fraud. Bail was accepted and the preliminary hearing will take place at Blyth before Mr. Seager, P.M., on Friday next. The witnesses examined to-day were: From Toronto houses, Messrs. J. McDonald, R. H. Green and Mr. Hall, of Gowans, Kent & Co. Mr. Hall gave positive evidence as to silverware and other goods having been bought by Mrs. Jessop before Christmas. The prosecution gave notice to proceed with the conspiracy charges at the fall Assizes.

WOMAN AND HOME.

FROG FARMING AS AN ENTERPRISE FOR WOMEN.

Sympathy With Children—Vary the Daily Menu—Milk as Children's Food—The Greatest Problem For Women—About Complexions.

Just about the most simple and profitable scheme for money making a woman can go into is the unique and yet quite reasonable business of frog raising. Over in England, where the ambitious and industrious minister is filling her stocking with gold from chicken farms, scientific butter making, rabbit raising, cat culture and dog breeding, the frog idea has caught on, with practical results. Frog farming actually requires less effort, less output and less responsibility than any of the professions enumerated above, and if a hard headed American woman wishes to figure on profits and markets before she begins experimenting here are some items offered for her consideration:

In the first place, frog legs are not a diet restricted to eccentric and abnormal French people. The cities of Boston, New York and Philadelphia each consume daily hundreds of pounds of this juicy, flavor some flesh, and the demand for this special meat is steady the 12 months round. Indeed so strong is the frog market in winter that the price per pound for logs runs up to 50 cents and $1, while never in the dull months does it fall below 50 cents a pound. The reason for this is easy to discover. Not yet does the supply equal the demand, and, according to the proprietors of markets, restaurants and hotels, the demand is steadily increasing.

However, all these foregoing statistics do not count for a pin with a woman who has a business head until she learns how much it costs to bring Rana esculenta, as the edible species is called, to a condition fit for table use. This requires, first of all, possession of suitable ponds or a stretch of low, well watered grounds where the frogs will never suffer for lack of moisture. In a series of small pools they thrive and multiply most rapidly. Shallow pools they ought to be, well grown with water plants, having thick mud bottoms and not less than 10 to 15 feet wide.

HARVESTING HER FROGS.

A series of pools is better than an extent of marsh, for the frogs are easier to fatten in them, more perfectly protected against their enemies and more quickly caught for market than in a great spread of boggy land. Salt marsh, of course, will not serve the purpose, and it is vain to attempt frog raising where droughts are frequent and severe.

Now, as a matter of fact, the true edible frog, Rana esculenta, found in southern Europe, is not a native of our states. But to stock a pond with very tender, solid frog flesh the American Rana palustris serves well enough. His long, plump legs and those of our native bullfrog please the most fastidious epicure.

The first is a slender, handsome, extremely agile, long limbed fellow, that comes out in almost any woodland pond, and the woman who is going into frog culture can bargain with the small boys in her neighborhood for the frogs in stock her preserves. For $5 she should be able to buy enough of these creatures almost to provide an Egyptian plague, and unceremoniously they must be dumped by the bucketful into their new quarters. The first six months they are best left to their own devices. Housekeeping duties and family cares are sure to keep them busy, and the owner of the ponds can feel confident her colony is thriving if the water shows an abundance of lively tadpoles, or hanging from the leaves and roots along the banks show clusters of tiny jellylike globules. These are eggs that require about one month for hatching.

A pond stocked in the late autumn will not produce anything the first winter, but directly spring comes round and before the swallows arrive from the south voices from the ponds will denote that eggs are being attached to every available point, and at night the croaking will rise to a will roar. For this the male frogs are responsible. The croaking is a well meant effort at a musical courtship. By the latter part of April or the 1st of May the ponds ought to be overflowing with young frogs eager for food. Slugs, insects, etc., they will snap up for themselves, and gladly eat bread and meat.

They do not actually require regular feeding unless the pond is very much overstocked, but French breeders have found by feeding they produce more and better flesh for the market. When the first spring hatching of tadpoles develops into lively young frogs, the ponds begin to offer the owner profits.

With a small boy to assist her, a pair of boots and a water proof coat and hat, and the feminine proprietor should then learn how to wade right in and catch frogs.—Chicago Record.

Sympathy With Children.

There are many parents who seem to think all sympathy or interest is wasted when given to children. The little ones are told so often not to ask so many questions, and to keep still, that they are repressed just as fast as they should be learning the most, and by a natural method. A child will remember those things he sees and asks about a great deal better than something he reads that is full of words that he cannot understand. Many teachers do not take the trouble to make full explanations of questions puzzling the child. So the child is repressed both at home and at school. A child treated in this way will soon learn to seek for information on the street and in other ways.

12,000 tickets were sold at the box office, Kingston, Dominion Day, for Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show.

Amos Storey was bitten on the side by a vicious horse in the big stables, Deseronto, last week.

Cholera and all summer complaints are so quick in their action that the cold hand of death is upon the victims before they are aware that danger is near. If attacked do not delay in getting the proper medicine. Try a dose of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, and you will get immediate relief. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to effect a cure.

It is said that the Deseronto Public School Board will require the services of four new teachers after the vacation, that number of the staff contemplating matrimony.

Thos. J. Kenny, master-at-arms on the American battleship Indiana, was murdered by one of the crew with whom he had an altercation.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion is occasioned by the want of action in the biliary ducts, loss of vitality in the stomach to secret the gastric juices, without which digestion cannot go on; also, being the principal cause of Headache. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills taken before going to bed, for a while, never fail to give relief and effect a cure. Mr. F. W. Ashdown, Ashdown, Ont., writes: "Parmelee's Pills are taking the lead against ten other makes which I have in stock."

An eruption of the Mayon volcano on one of the Philippine islands killed 120 of the inhabitants of the village of Lebourg and greatly damaged the subsequent crop. The volcano has been asleep since 1617.

The crops on Amherst Island are looking well. The grain crops will be very large. The recent rains have done a great deal of good.

Out of Sorts.—Symptoms, Headache, loss of appetite, furred tongue, and general indisposition. These symptoms, if neglected, develope into acute disease. It is a trite saying that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and a little attention at this point may save months of sickness and large doctor's bills. For this complaint take from two to three of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills on going to bed, and one or two for three nights in succession, and a cure will be effected.

Edward Gilmour, a supervisor at Rockwood Asylum, was struck on the head twice with a heavy crockery jar by an inmate and knocked senseless. The patient was behind the door as Gilmour entered.

For Nine Years.—Mr. Samuel Byan, Thedford, writes: "For nine years I suffered with ulcerated sores on my leg; I expended over $100 to physicians, and tried every preparation I heard of or saw recommended for such disease, but could get no relief. I at last was recommended to give Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil a trial, which has vanished, after using eight bottles (using it internally and externally), in a complete cure. I believe it is the best medicine in the world, and I write this to let others know what it has done for me."

A rig containing twenty-five children, being driven to a Sunday School picnic near Stirling, had a narrow escape. The traces became unhooked and allowing the pole to fall, the horses ran away, the driver, Mr. McDonnell, was thrown out and very badly injured; in fact so badly that his recovery is doubtful. A little girl named Tulloch was also injured, but not badly, and the rest of the children were all more or less shaken up.

Much distress and sickness in children is caused by worms. Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator gives relief by removing the cause. Give it a trial and be convinced.

A young lad named McKenzie, of Dundas, died recently from rabies, and his brother, who was bitten by the same dog, has gone to the Pasteur Institute in New York.

Mrs. Mattice, an old woman living in a log house near Rapid City, Man., was killed last Friday. A cyclone struck the house lifting off the roof and blowing the four walls some distance.

Holloway's Corn Cure destroys all kinds of corns and warts, root and branch. Who then would endure them with such a cheap and effectual remedy within reach?

It may be only a trifling cold, but neglect it and it will fasten its fangs in your lungs, and you will soon be carried to an untimely grave. In this country we have sudden changes and must expect to have coughs and colds. We cannot avoid them, but we can effect a cure by using Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that has never been known to fail in curing coughs, colds, bronchitis and all affections of the throat, lungs and chest.

While the riots in and about Calcutta have been suppressed, a very uneasy feeling prevails. The native press is making bitter and unfounded charges against British officials, and calling upon the Mohammedans throughout the country to resent the scenes of the Indian mutiny.

A quiet June wedding took place at Deseronto on the 29th ult., the principals being George W. Rose, Gananoque, Ont., formerly of Deseronto, and Miss Martha Vankleeck, of Deseronto. The bride wore a becoming traveling suit, and both were entertained during the ceremony.

James McGlynn, fishery overseer on Wolfe Island, has been dismissed for offensive partisanship in 1896, and his friends are not a little surprised to know on what grounds the charge has been founded. Philip Vanness, formerly a liberal, now a patron, has been appointed in his stead. Vanness has been nominated for the position by D. D. Rogers, M.P.

A man may dress as well as his own good judgment and the assistance of an artistic tailor will allow, but if his "insides" be out of his digestive organs are out of order, he will have an unwholesome appearance. His complexion and eyes will tell the story, and he will look a wreck. His tongue will be coated, appetite poor, his teeth rusty, his breath abominable. He is on big, unmistakable sign of constipation. The quickest, surest, easiest way to cure this trouble is to take Dr. Pierces Pleasant Pellets. They are made of refined, concentrated vegetable extracts. Nothing in the least harmful enters into their composition. They hunt down all impurities, and "make them move on." They are the product of many years' study and practice. Dr. Pierce cannot afford to put forth a worthless article.

Woman's Neckwear.

The stock collar comes now in all the colors of the rainbow and in three distinct styles. First, there is the plain stock tied in little, stiff, narrow bows; second, there is the stock tied in soft, wide bows, and, last and newest, is the four-in-hand, which will be found useful in many instances, as it covers quite an expanse of shirt waist. Plaid silks are used in the making of these stock collars as well as plain silks and satins. Narrow linen collars, made especially to wear with the stocks, turn over the edge. More dressy are the linen lawn collars edged with narrow lace.

A SUCCESSFUL OAT CROP.

The Preparation of Soil—Commercial Fertilizers Dotted In—Choice of Seed.

The unwise practice that has so largely prevailed among farmers as a class, and that has contributed to so great an extent in the diminished yields of this important product, has been that the oat crop, after all others are occupying the choicest and most productive portions of the farm, is the latest sown not only, but is destined to struggle for existence in soil least adapted to its growth and development. Oats sown on a seed bed following a grass crop or turf pasture seldom give good results, but grown as one of the crops of a regular four year rotation, following corn, potatoes, beans, etc., seems the most favorable course to pursue, according to a western New York farmer who writes as follows to Rural New Yorker:

After a long experience in oat culture, it has been learned that early and thorough preparation of the soil possessing a fair degree of fertility, good clean seed sown with a drill at the rate of two bushels per acre, as early in the season as the soil is found to work in a light and friable condition, are factors that cannot be omitted if success is to be expected. It has also been learned that no crop responds more readily to a moderate application of commercial fertilizers drilled into the soil at the time the seed is sown. After seeding, the ground should be well rolled, thus firming the soil, inducing early growth of the plants and, if only, but it also adds much to the ease and pleasure in running the binder at the time of harvest.

Care should be taken that this crop is not allowed to become overripe. Heavier, brighter and more nutritious grain is secured and the straw is made more valuable and appetizing by harvesting at a period when much of the straw is apparently quite green, the precaution being taken not to have the bundles so large as to prevent curing properly for housing or stacking, as the case may be.

Nor is it essential, as advocated by many, that an occasional change of seed is required for best results. And I may state that for nearly a half century I have grown each year continuously—with the exception of one year—a mixture of the same two varieties of oats that have gained for me a favorable reputation as a grower of this special crop.

Fertilizers For Tobacco.

Under the auspices of the Connecticut station cottonseed meal, cotton hull ashes, linseed meal, castor pomace, nitrate of soda, double sulphate of potash and magnesia, carbonate of potash, double carbonate of potash and magnesia, dry ground fish, tobacco stems, wood ashes and several brands of fertilizers were tested in various combinations, and stable manure alone. The yields of unfermented tobacco and the comparative fire holding capacity of the tobacco grown on the different plats are tabulated. In the gross yield of cured leaf and of wrapper leaf, castor pomace was superior to cottonseed meal. Where one-half the nitrogen in an application of 210 pounds of nitrogen in the form of castor pomace was replaced by nitrogen in nitrate of soda the total yield of wrapper leaf was greater.

As to potash fertilizers, the largest gross yields followed applications of high grade sulphate, both with and without lime. The largest yield of wrappers was from plats manured with carbonate of potash and the double sulphate of potash and magnesia. The fire holding capacity was least in tobacco manured with high grade sulphate, followed by that fertilized with low grade sulphate. The plats dressed with fish and nitrate of soda, fish and double sulphate of potash and with stable manure gave the smallest yields.

Maple Sugar Drops.

Maple sugar drops are made by melting a pound of maple sugar with a cup of water and boiling the syrup until it is a creamy ball. Let it cool when the sirup reaches this stage, and when you can bear your finger in it begin stirring it. When it is about the consistency of lard, knead it on a marble board or a platter until it is an even, smooth fondant. Melt it by setting the bowl in a pan of boiling water and drop it by the spoonful on buttered tins.—Exchange.

Spring Wall Paper....

C. B. SCANTLEBURY

—MAKES AN ANNOUNCEMENT.

Perfection has been reached in the New Wall Papers we are showing this spring.

Our new sample books are now ready. There are really no marked changes in the styles. Whatever your taste fancies, it can be successfully catered to from among the light dainty shades to the darker richer tones in Reds, Blues, Greens, Terra cottas, Tans, Browns, Violets and Umbers, Ochres, Siennas, Greys, Heliotropes, etc., while prices are lower than ever.

If it is at all convenient to visit our warerooms we will place all of our facilities at your disposal, and there are none better in this whole broad Dominion.

The new goods are simply beautiful—the only trouble is, the commonplace name of "Wall Paper" does not begin to convey to your minds, the wealth of design and coloring in these exquisite interior decorations.

If you cannot visit us, please write a postal for samples. Just say what rooms you think of papering, what prices you want to pay, and where you saw the advertisement.

The samples are all done up in book form and in complete sets of Wall Friezes and Ceiling, and are sent to you free of charge either by mail or express. These samples enable you to make as intelligent a selection as one could wish for. We pay express charges on orders.

Oil Well Notes.

Drilling at the oil well re-commenced Monday morning. The last ten days or more had been spent fishing for the obstruction which proved to be a bunch of casing rod. Then again in spudding around the broken bit the spud was broken off and driven in tight by the hole. Early Saturday morning the tools were all successfully fished out. The work is now proceeding merrily and it will be definitely known before this item appears who the lucky one of the first obstruction has been successfully disposed of.

Who Was It?

Mr. Coldham and a Napanee excursionist from Colin and probably a dozen more had a high old time at Shannonville Saturday. The stranger had loosed the long spun the wine and was taking a little too much along. He was wandering in the street and close to the edge of the sidewalk and would have fallen in had not Mr. Coldham nabbed him. He was taken to an hotel where he slept off the effects of the night. The stranger had a gold watch and chain and a superabundance of money — Wing.

Wedded in Montreal.

A very pretty wedding took place at St. John's church, Montreal, on the evening of June 30th. Rev. Canon Dixon officiating, the contracting parties being Thomas Purcell, eldest son of Thomas Purcell, city, and Jennie, second daughter of the late Stephen Hill, Newburgh, Ont. The bride was given away by her brother-in-law, Mr. A. W. Lees, while Agnes, sister of the bride, acted as part of bride-maid and Mr. G. Cook performed a similar duty for the groom. After the ceremony about thirty-five invited guests sat down to a beautiful repast at the residence of the bride's sister, 30 Quesnel st. The happy couple left the same evening amidst showers of rice and old shoes for a week's visit at Ottawa.—Con.

Improvements

It is very gratifying to notice improvements at any time by our business men, but particularly so when many are complaining of dull trade. Friend "Phil," of the John street Tonsorial and Bath Parlors, has during the past few days made a great me amorphosis in his place of business. The partition which divided the place has been taken out, thus doubling the size of the room. The bath room has been placed in an alcove, out of sight. A beautiful case has been placed in the front of the shop in which the genial proprietor will keep the best domestic and imported cigars for his customers. The whole walls and ceilings have been covered with beautiful papers and frizes, that are pleasing and restful to the eye, and give the place a cheerful and homelike appearance. The old front has been removed and replaced by plate glass. As "Phil" is a hustling business man and buys where he can do the best with his money, and buys at home, it need hardly be said that he bought the wall paper and tiled sides for his windows at Henry's bookstore.

The Orangemen's Excursion

To Watertown on Monday next promises to be one of the most successful that ever left our town. The event has been well advertised and the brethren seem to be taking hold of the matter right merrily. From a circular issued at Watertown it is learned that extensive preparations have been made to entertain the excursionists. The members of the lodges will be first escorted to the various hotels and restaurants for dinner on the arrival of the train. The procession will then be formed and proceed to Riverside Park, where addresses will be delivered by men prominent in the order. Among the list of speakers we notice the names of Alex. Reid, M.P.P., John W. Bell, M. P., and Rev. G. S. White. Train leaves Napanee at 6.30 a. m. and Watertown at 6.30 p. m. The Citizens' Band will accompany the excursion. Tickets from Napanee only $1.50. Go!

Prostrated by the Heat.

Last Monday while painting a steel roof Sandy Murdoch, of Salem, was overcome by the intense heat, and had to lay up for a day or so. It is thought no serious results will follow.

"Billy" Lewis, the popular driver of the Kingston stage, sustained a partial sunstroke in Kingston on Saturday last. He is at present at Sproule's hotel, Odessa, and doing nicely. About the only effect that can be noticed is a thickness in his speech.

A report was circulated about town that Mr. Wm. Norris, owner of the Grange farm, north of the town, had succumbed to the effects of a sunstroke on Wednesday. There was no truth in the rumor.

Epworth League Convention.

The annual convention of the Epworth League of the Bay of Quinte conference will be held in connection with the International gathering of young Methodists in Toronto. The conference Convention will open in Sherbourne St. Methodist church, on Thursday, July 15th, 1897, at 10 a.m. sharp. At the morning session business will be transacted and officers elected. It is important that all the Methodist Young People's societies shall be represented. The scale of representation being one official delegate for every 20 members or fraction thereof. A good programme will be provided. The railway rate is single fare on the certificate plan. The International convention opens Thursday afternoon. Any further information can be had by applying to Rev. C. W. Watch, Brighton.

Fun at the Park

At the meeting held in the Town Hall last Monday night by those interested in getting up the Grand Fete and bicycle parade to be held in the park, it was decided to hold the Fete on Thursday evening, 15th inst., gates to be opened at 6 o'clock. A base ball match will be put on from 7 to 8 o'clock, to be followed by a burlesque football match to last half an hour; a fancy bicycle drill, under the direction of Mr. W. Smith, will then be given, and immediately after the grand illuminated bicycle parade. All bicyclists are cordially invited to take part in the parade—the more the merrier. Decorate your wheel and come along. Bicyclists to assemble on the driving track, near the platform, at half past eight. When the price of admission to the park is only 10 cts. we bespeak a big crowd. Ice cream, cake and lemonade to be had on the grounds.

See the bicycle parade in the park next Thursday, the 15th. Lots of other amusements. Admission 10cts.

Burtch's Jubilee Comedy Co.

Has all the week been presenting to our citizens the latest efforts of the playwriters in the way of comedies. The fact that the company was not up to its compliment of members until Thursday night interfered somewhat with giving the best results the early part of the week. The attendance, considering the intensely hot weather, when humanity is prone to be outside as much as possible, was very fair. Mr. James Durkin, besides being the leading character, is stage manager and in the way in which the different plays are rendered shows that he well understands his business. Mr. Durkin has played in Napanee before and is well thought of by our people. Helen Minkley, the leading lady, has became a favorite with the audiences, and her rendition of the difficult roles assigned to her shows that she possesses abilities of a high order. Her costuming is said to be the finest ever seen in Napanee. The "old man" of Mr. Simmons is seldom equalled and never excelled. John T. Shunk, in his latest songs, sung in good voice, always receives an encore. Neva Irwin is a very artistic dancer for one so young, and her appearance is eagerly looked for and applauded. The other members of the company are well up in their parts, and give strong support to the leaders.

To-night, by special request, they will produce Tuesday evening's bill, "Caprice." This play was so thoroughly satisfactory that many appealed to Mr. Burtch for its repetition, which will undoubtedly be attended by a crowded house.

On Saturday night the great western drama, "Nugget Nell," will be produced with attention and detail. This is a pretty combination of humor and pathos, relieved by a number of breezy specialties. The comic Knife Fight in the third act between a Mexican and Indian is well worth the price of admission. Saturday evening's performance will terminate their stay, and on Monday, 12th, they will commence a week's engagement in Deseronto.

SPORTING.

CRICKET.

Belleville cricket club has been wonderfully strengthened by three expert cricketers from Barbados, who are at present attending a business college in that city.

CYCLING.

The New York World thinks that next year most people will find wheels costing less than $20 good enough. That may be too sanguine, but there is no reason why the best of wheels should not be sold at or below $50.

The London News says: "Shoemakers, or some of them, say that bicycling tends to broaden the feet of women. That is not a bad thing. Anything that tends to enlarge the scope of understanding should be encouraged."

He is not always greatest who leaves in his rear the deepest track, nor is he swiftest who has got the biggest lump upon his back.

YACHTING.

The second race of the series, by the Napanee Yacht club, will be run this afternoon over the same course as the preceding one. A new yacht will be in the list, the Sarah Mr. Albert Dafoe as skipper. The Reindeer will carry extra canvas and the lion of a contest is looked for. Being a hill holiday, it is expected a large company will witness the event. If the wind is right, an exciting race is looked for.

The races of the Lake Yachting Association will be conducted on the following days: Kingston, Monday, July 26th; Cobourg, Friday, 23d; Toronto, Tuesday, 27th; Hamilton, Thursday, 29th; and Niagara on-the-Lake, Saturday, 31st.

FOOTBALL.

The action of the Deseronto association football club in defaulting the last league match to the Kingston club may be likened to the sinking of a spoiled child. The last match was scheduled for Saturday, and Deseronto was asked if it was intended to come down on Friday or on Saturday. The reply was very brief. "Neither was all the telegram contained. It is presumed the members are huffed over the decision of the referee in the last Napanee-Deseronto match. It might be added that the referee on that occasion knows the rules of association football perhaps better than any other player in Canada, and he has been playing the game all his life time. So long as everything went swimmingly in favor of Deseronto the members of that team were broad smiles, but when by skilful playing another team proved itself just a little better, the players from the Mohawk reservation became indignant. They proved themselves void of sporting principles in insisting upon claiming a goal kicked from a glaring off-side. The Kingston team had the last grounds in the world for a protest in its meeting with the Deseronto team, but for the sake of harmony and peace allowed the matter to go, thus giving Deseronto two points not earned nor deserved. In return for all this the pettish Deseronotes get on their high horse and, like the child in the song, say, "I don't want to play in your yard." The Kingston team has submitted an offer to go to Deseronto once more to finish the schedule. As matters now stand the Kingston club wins the cup with twelve points. Sydenham is next with eleven.—Whig.

Pittsburg's Latest Horror.

Pittsburg, Pa., July 7.—Four people were fatally injured and 18 or 20 others were hurt in a street car wreck last night on the Forbes street line of the Consolidated Traction Company.

The wreck happened on the Soho hill at the time when the immense crowds, which attended the fireworks display at Schenley park, were returning home. An Atwood street car had gone about half way down the hill when it jumped the track. Closely following it came an open summer car with a trailer, both packed with people. Before the second train could be stopped it crashed into the derailed car. Hardly had the first collision happened before a third car, heavily laden, came down the hill at full speed, and forced its way into the wreck ahead. By now the second crash that did most of the damage.

DIVISION FENCES.

Cheaply Made and Effectively Used In Ohio For Dividing Pastures.

Waldo F. Brown, one of Ohio's progressive farmers, believes that it adds greatly to the value of a pasture to divide it into three parts. By this plan he changes the cows each week, so that they will go on a fresh pasture each Monday, and each lot will have two weeks to grow for one week to be grazed. It is made to appear that these division fences can be made very cheaply. Following is an illustrated description, originally submitted by Mr. Brown to Country Gentleman:

We make division fences with fine plain wires—one a ribbon wire to show, so that they will not run into it, and with posts 80 feet apart. We stretch these wires perfectly tight with a ratchet, made to be used with a common monkey wrench, and then staple a light paling—1½ inches thick and 3 inches wide—every 10 feet. This keeps the cows from spreading the wires apart and crawling through. These ratchets cost but 10 cents each and give perfect control of the wires, as with a wrench you can at any time take up the slack in a wire, and on level land a wire from 60 to 80 rods long can be stretched.

In making this fence the end posts must be set deep and thoroughly braced, and then the staples used on the posts must not be driven so as to hold the wire close, but left so that they will play back and forth, but on the palings the staples must be driven tight. The best plan of bracing the end posts which I have ever found is an iron rear brace, as shown in the engraving. B-S the brace, B B the bolts, M S the mudsill, to which the lower end of the brace is bolted. The upper end is bolted to the post P. We make the braces of old wagon tires and use half inch bolts. W W W W are the wires. The advantage of rear bracing is that the strain of the wires pulls the post down instead of lifting it up, as is the case with a prop front brace.

Why Bees Do Not Swarm.

There are various reasons why bees do not swarm. Here are some of the reasons specified by Kansas Farmer:

In the first place, it is well known that the common or black bees do not increase to such an extent under the same conditions as do the Italian bees. The honey season has also much to do with it. During a scarcity of honey, bees will not increase so rapidly as if the honey flow was heavy. Also the size of the hive has much to do with the control of swarming. If abundance of room is given black bees for storage, they will seldom swarm at all, even in the best of honey seasons. Plenty of storage room has much to do in controlling the swarming of Italian bees, but they are more liable to swarm than blacks. It is very important to have beehives just the right size, even if they are made old box fashion. A very large hive will never produce good results any way you take it. Hives should be made sectional, and if at any time more room is needed add another section. The required size, as given in our standard works, is about 2,000 cubic inches.

The Plank Drag.

An Indiana farmer assures Rural New Yorker that he finds a good plank drag indispensable in preparing lands for any crop. He has a homemade affair which he prizes. Here is what he says about it: It is made of 2 inch plank and is 3 by 6 feet in size. At the front end harrow teeth are set in, sloping back, so that they will not catch and pull trash. These teeth elevate the front end of the drag and help to break up the large clods and stir the soil.

INDIANA PLANK DRAG.

"Why didn't you keep to your own side of the road

You Blooming Idiot"

Well, perhaps it was my fault, but never mind, I have a pot of "Quickcure" in my kit and it will cure her bruises before we get home. You never saw anything like the way it will heal a cut or a bruise of any kind, and for sprains and strains it is—well, it is just "out of sight."

HENRY IEVERS, L.D.S., Quebec, writes: "One of my children sprained her ankle, which became much swollen and discoloured. Some 'Quickcure' was spread on linen, and applied; the pain ceased at once, the swelling was gone the next day, and on the fourth day she walked to school as usual. I have also proved it to be a wonderful remedy for cuts and bruises.
